Toll High In School Gunfight

Students Vs. Mexican Army

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Army troops and police fought skirmishes with rooftop snipers today after soldiers in armored cars seized a vocational school on the northwest side of Mexico City in a five-hour gun battle.

At least 15 persons including a policeman were killed and 35 students and riot police were wounded.

The area around the vocational school, part of the campus of the national Polytechnical Institute, was a shambles. Homes and apartment buildings were shot up; windows were broken; glass, rocks and spent rifle cartridges littered the streets.

Thousands of federal troops were called in to reinforce riot and judicial police, using armored assault cars which resemble tanks on wheels.

The Red Cross Hospital reported the deaths of a riot policeman and 14 students.

The government sent troops in more than 400 assault cars to the Santo Tomas vocational school after riot police and students inside the school had battled for more than five hours with guns, pistols, knives, clubs, Molotov cocktails, stones and tear gas.

It was the most violent skirmish so far in the two-month-long student rebellion against President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

One police official said more than 1,000 students had been arrested in the first six hours of fighting.

Athletes continued to arrive for the 1969 Olympic Games, scheduled to start Oct. 12, and no Mexican Olympic official would comment on the possibility that the games might be cancelled because of the violence now in its seventh day. But many foreign spectators seemed certain to stay away.

8 Executive Homes Bombed In Toronto Mystery Raids

Aircraft Firms Target of Blasts

TORONTO (CP)—The homes or property of eight top executives of Hawker Siddeley (Canada) Ltd., and de Havilland Aircraft of Canada, Ltd., were bombed early today. There were no injuries and damage was reported to be slight.

Published reports here said police believed the explosions could be the work of terrorists protesting the Vietnam war, but Harold Adamson, deputy police chief, said police have "issued no statements on our theories."

He added: "I won't comment now on any theories we do have."

Hawker Siddeley's subsidiary, de Havilland, supplies Caribou transport planes for the United States war effort in Vietnam.

The bombs, apparently home-made, were placed at the front of homes in the suburban boroughs of North York and Etobicoke between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. EDT. Police said damage was limited to windows.

W. Wallace Muir, a Hawker-Siddeley vice-president, said whoever planted the bombs apparently did not want anyone hurt.

"They just wanted to scare us, but I don't know why," he said.

James Mackey, Metropolitan Toronto police chief, is personally leading the investigation into the blasts.

NO MOTIVE ESTABLISHED

There were later reports of bomb damage to property of two former employees of the firms. Russell Bannock, former sales manager of de Havilland, who left his job in January, reported his home damaged.

Larry Clark, a former employee of Hawker Siddeley, said his wife heard a noise during the night, and when he ran out of gasoline on his way to work today he found a hole blasted in his car gas tank.

A spokesman for the city police department said no motive has been established for the bombings and it was not known whether the explosions were the work of one man or of a team.

The spokesman said one man could have carried out the bombings by using time fuses but he thought that "since the bombing locations were fairly widespread this is more likely to be the work of a team."

NOT LABOR ISSUE

One Hawker Siddeley official said he does not believe labor problems were involved.

P. Y. Davoud, a vice-president of de Havilland who ran to his front room to find two windows shattered, said the bombings were the work of a highly-organized team, not someone trying to settle a grudge against a single person or even a single firm.

Hawker Siddeley, 90-per-cent British controlled, has worldwide interests in manufacturing steel, aircraft and other transportation equipment. De Havilland is a Hawker Siddeley subsidiary.

Other properties hit were occupied by William Boggs, de Havilland president; John Ready, vice-president and secretary of Hawker Siddeley; Archibald Baile, senior vice-president of finance for Hawker Siddeley, and vice-presidents D. G. Kettering and William Walker of Hawker Siddeley.

After the first few explosions, police raced to warn other executives of the companies.

Czechs Score NATO

PRAGUE (AP)—Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist party said today the Soviet invasion should not be used as an excuse to revive the cold war, a development it declared is being talked up in capitals of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

There is a fundamental difference between the solidarity with Czechoslovakia expressed by the Communist parties of Western Europe and "the pseudosolidarity of those who shed tears over the fate of 'little Czechoslovakia' but at the same time invoke the cold war spirit," Rude Pravo said.

The editorial in the Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper, which avoided blaming Moscow for increasing East-West tension, marked the first such criticism of the West seen here since the Aug. 20 invasion.

It appeared as Czechoslovak sources said the Russians had agreed in principle to withdraw all but about seven divisions, or about 100,000, of the 500,000 troops sent into Czechoslovakia last month.

They said the pullout hinged on purging of certain officials and a further crack-down on the press.

PRESSURE ON PRESS

The editorial, regarded as evidence of pressure on the Czechoslovak press to prove its true communism, said it was embarrassing that "the further we get from Aug. 21 (the first full day of the occupation), the more frequently they speak of cold war in NATO capitals."

"Revival of the cold war is of no benefit to either East or West for it can only harm the normalization of our economy and political, social and private life," Rude Pravo said.

'Little Old Lady' Wins Oil Bonanza But Richter Will Take Second Look

By JOHN MIKA

The proverbial little old lady today won first prize in the biggest raffle that's ever come to town—first pick of all she wanted in oil and gas exploration rights on 8.5 million hillside acres flanking the Peace River plateau.

Miss A. L. Maloan, who soon will celebrate her 79th birthday after living quietly at 3200 Glasgow since 1927, said she was "absolutely dismayed at becoming a celebrity."

She was one of hundreds of "dummy buyers" rounded up at tea parties and beer parlors for a stampede into the splashiest, if not most important, oil rush ever to hit the province's capital.

The whole affair—designed by the mines department to inject a little interest into an area persistently avoided by the oil companies—was such a dream-come-true that Mines Minister Frank Richter faces a nightmarish decision Wednesday morning.

"We may have to cancel the whole thing after all," he told The Times even before the first of several draws took place in the new provincial museum's fancy theatre.

"None of the bids have to be accepted and I'll take a very careful look at the whole thing when I get back tomorrow morning."

NO HANKY-PANKY

"We won't confirm any sales until then, because we don't want any suggestion of any kind of hanky-panky at an oil sale."

"We certainly didn't expect this kind of reaction because this had been such a neglected area but, if nothing else, this will give us a measure of reaction from the industry and we will see where we go from here tomorrow."

Here is his problem.

For years, various exploration permits on the Rocky Mountains and foothills beside the Peace plateau have been lapsed by oil companies who lost interest in the high costs and no results of exploration on rocky slopes.

NEVER NOMINATED

Every time a quarterly exploration rights sale has been held, the department asks the industry to "nominate" government land they would like to see put up for the next bonus auction. The slopes were never nominated.

Concerned about this dead area in the midst of excited activity elsewhere, the department cast around for a way to stimulate some exploration interest in the slopes.

It decided to try an approach it took only once before—back in 1960 when the still-novel offshore areas were put up for bid as a pure speculation by oil companies.

To induce interest in the undersea area, the department eliminated the bonus auction system and merely announced it would hold a draw among the applicants to determine who could choose the acreage he wanted at the nominal government annual fee for $250 per parcel for a permit and a nickel an acre for rental merely for exploration purposes.

SEDATE DRAW

That experiment saw 17 companies turn out to put their names in the hat for a sedate draw—and it resulted ultimately in the current explorations by SEDCO off-shore drilling rig which the department still hopes will make a major strike.

Attempting to repeat its success of arousing interest, it advertised earlier this year that it would put up the 8.5 million dormant acres the same way—no "bonus" bidding by applicants, just everybody taking their chances on a draw for the privilege of paying the nominal fee.

This way, if all the land was taken up, the government coffers would only be increased by about $500,000 in permit and acreage fees, compared with the normal $2 to $4 million which is realized by regular bonus auctions for exploration permits.

The response of the oil companies was as electrifying as it was unexpected.

Unlike the totally untried offshore area of 1960, the Rocky Mountain slopes were known to be poor and expensive prospects for oil exploration—but at least they were known intimately by the industry.

'DIRT CHEAP'

"With no extra bonuses to pay for the right to explore, even relatively unpromising land becomes attractive at the 'dirt cheap' price of the nominal permit fees."

"I guess they decided that the money saved on bonus bidding could be spent on exploration so that they'd have a better chance of finding something if it was."

Trudeau 'Hushed Up' Civil Spy Affair

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says a civil servant who tried to raise money by selling military secrets was caught by the RCMP earlier this year and forced to quit his job.

The newspaper says it

"pieced together" the story of the former civil servant, whom the RCMP refused to identify but who was a one-time employee of the defence department.

The man began his career in spying while working for the director-general of intelligence and security and tried to sell his secrets after he switched to another unnamed but "non-sensitive" government department.

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Turner said today the government decided it was "not in the public interest" to prosecute a government employee investigated by the RCMP for suspected illegal acts.

He refused to give any details of the case despite a barrage of opposition questions in the Commons.

The man suffered financial reverses, the story says.

The newspaper says the case broke last January but was "hushed up" by the RCMP and the federal justice department after Prime Minister Trudeau, then justice minister, ruled that prosecution of the man would not be in the public interest.

Ottawa Heeds Anderson's Get-to-Work Plea

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons throne-speech debate ended two days early Monday after complaints from two Liberal freshmen that the whole exercise had been useless and irrelevant.

The general debate was cut off by all-party agreement late in its sixth day, leaving the way clear for the Commons to settle its regular business today.

David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich), a 31-year-old lawyer formerly with the external affairs department, said valuable time was being devoted to matters he considered irrelevant.

Members did not come to Parliament to hear warmed-up election speeches but to carry out the government program and to put forward private members' bills and motions.

"It is extremely important for the House to realize that we, the younger and newer members, have not been satisfied with the performance in this chamber that we have witnessed during the throne speech debate."

Mr. Anderson spoke of a deliberate policy by older members of the House, including House leaders of the various parties, to let new members speak in the debate when they knew there was little chance of a vote being taken.

"I feel they should be aware that we shall not continue to tolerate this tokenism which allows us to speak but does not allow any decision to be made on the basis of what we have said."

Mr. Anderson used only five minutes of the 30 allowed him.

The other unhappy Liberal was Ontario MP Norman Cafik, a 29-year-old commercial publisher from Pickering, who said opposition non-confidence motions had tied the House up in a ceremonial debate which cost about $1,000,000 and did nothing for Parliament or the people.

'ELIMINATE RITUAL'

"I realize that it is traditional to go through this ritual, but perhaps if it were dispensed with, Parliament would be held in much higher regard by the Canadian people."

"I do not believe that by going through this debate we are serving any useful purpose."

Conservative MP Heath Macquarrie attacked as meanlymouthing a letter sent by External Affairs Minister Sharp to Secretary-General U Thant on the possibility of raising the Biafra issue in the United Nations.

Mr. Sharp's letter had said that it "could be divisive" to raise the issue.

"It would be a shocking thing to have division while thousands die," Mr. Macquarrie commented.

This is the kind of utterance which would make Neville Chamberlain appear as one of the most vigorous and aggressive men of all times."

Mr. Macquarrie conceded there would be danger in flying in supplies.

"But are we in this new generation of such little faith that we as a nation and as a people are afraid of division and afraid of danger?"

"I say: 'Forsake your fears, discard your technical niceties, throw off your protective coloration of protocol and assist the people in Biafra whose suffering is indescribable.'"

Officials to Pave Way For Constitution Meet

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Officials of federal and provincial governments meet here Wednesday for three days of constitutional talks.

And a federal official has predicted "there will be some breast-beating" in reaction to the weekend disclosure of the contents of a Quebec brief submitted to the last such meeting in July.

Saturday the Toronto Telegram made public the contents of the document which reiterated the long-standing demand for a redistribution of powers between federal and provincial government and a negotiable suggestion—the headline-making proposal that Canada become a republic.

Until then the meetings of the federal-provincial committee of officials had been held in the strictest secrecy.

The committee was set up by the constitutional conference composed of the prime minister and the premiers. Its role is to prepare the next meeting of heads of government, expected in late November or early December.

All governments agreed that negotiations would be more flexible if the committee meetings were held in secret.

Disclosure of the Quebec brief's contents provides the first clear public evidence that Prime Minister Trudeau's sweeping election victory in Quebec last June did not bring about any immediate reassessment of constitutional goals by the provincial government.

The document, submitted to the committee of officials during the month following the election, clings to the constitutional position held by the Johnson government since it came to power in 1966.

FIRM BASIS
It is as firmly based on "two nations" as Mr. Trudeau's campaign was on "one nation."

Since July, however, the provincial Liberal opposition has swung sharply toward a more federalist constitutional policy, softening its past stand in favor of a special status as a result of an elaborate survey of Quebec opinion.

In the immediate aftermath of the publication of the Quebec brief there was speculation here that it had been leaked in Quebec by a minister of official relations to commit Premier Daniel Johnson publicly to a relatively hard line and prevent him from changing his ground as Mr. Lesage has done.

Although the suggestion that the monarchy be replaced by a republican system drew most immediate public attention it had a minor place in the brief.

Premier Johnson has repeatedly told reporters in the past that Quebec has other goals much more important than the abolition of the monarchy, although he personally favors a presidential rather than parliamentary and monarchical system of government.

Some observers here now believe that the suggestion was made in the brief mainly as a bargaining point which Quebec could concede in exchange for the enlarged powers that have been its long-standing goal.

Grade Work, Graveling For Renfrew

Regraveling will account for a large slice of the $100,000 to be spent on the Jordan River Port Renfrew Road, Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch said Monday.

He said the project, given approval by treasury board, also will include reducing the steep road, grades at several creek crossings and improving the bridge approaches.

Work will begin this fall and is expected to be completed sometime during the winter, he said.

Another treasury board approval, for expenditure of $2,285,000, will see construction begin soon on the first phase of Greater Victoria's long-awaited provincial vocational school project to be sited on Interurban Road, near the Willardson Road provincial jail.

The initial sum will provide the workshop complex for the school which is estimated to cost an ultimate $4.5 million.

Shells Rain On Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese forces fired 105-millimeter howitzer shells into Cambodia to silence Viet Cong gunners shooting across the frontier, the commander of South Vietnam's 3rd Corps said today.

The disclosure by Lt.-Gen. Do Cao Tri came soon after American strategic bombers dropped 750 tons of bombs in saturation patterns along the Cambodian frontier during the night. The four big raids on the infiltration route northwest of Saigon indicated continuing apprehension that further Communist efforts are expected in the area.

Hold-Up Men Killed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Two men attempting to rob a bank branch were shot to death and a companion was wounded today by police who had stalked out the bank on a tip, officials reported.

YOUNG HEART TRANSPLANTED TO MAN, 46

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuters) — A 46-year-old Mesa, Ariz., man today received the heart of a 17-year-old high school student in a transplant operation at Methodist Hospital.

A hospital bulletin said Dr. Michael DeBakey and a team of specialists has "satisfactorily completed the operation on Verne L. Martin." The patient was "progressing satisfactorily."

The donor was Michael Jennings who died of head injuries from an auto accident Sunday.

It was the world's 52nd heart transplant, the 32nd in the United States and the 16th in Houston.

DRUG BILL RETURNS TO COMMONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Monday reintroduced its bill aimed at lowering drug prices.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford got speedy and routine first reading of the measure which would wipe out some of the patent protection now enjoyed by Canadian manufacturers and thus encourage more foreign competition.

A similar bill was presented in the last Parliament but it died when Prime Minister Trudeau dissolved Parliament for a general election.

New Democratic Party spokesmen said during the election preliminaries that the drug companies had mounted such a strong campaign against the bill that the government would not bring it back before a new Parliament.

Conservative opposition to the bill when it was first debated was that the easy importation of drugs would make it impossible to control their quality.

Conservatives also said the impact on the Canadian drug industry may seriously reduce its ability to carry on drug research.

John Turner, who was then consumer affairs minister, said the food and drug directorate would continue to exercise strong control on drug imports.

The government also says the legislation will not affect employment in the Canadian drug industry. It said too that little research is carried on in Canada and what little is done is due more to government subsidy than patent protection.

Back From Talks

LONDON (Reuters) — British government envoy James Bottomley arrived here today from confidential talks in Rhodesia that could lead to another effort by Prime Minister Wilson to settle Rhodesia's independence issue.

Housing Problems Blamed On Lack of Co-ordination

QUEBEC (CP) — Federal housing laws may be all right but they don't get a chance to work, a series of spokesmen complained Monday in representations to the Hellyer housing inquiry.

Quebec Mayor Gilles Lamontagne said the Quebec provincial government and the federal government take too long to process the city's plans for action, possibly because their agencies cannot get along.

A low-income group waiting years for the benefits of urban renewal in the decaying St. Roch area of this city said Mayor Lamontagne is "always throwing the ball back to the provincial government."

Another group, in an afternoon appearance before Transport Minister Hellyer, said only a new super-body will cut through the clutter of boards and agencies that now control housing decisions.

Laval University's school of architecture proposed that officials selected from governments, lending institutions and building firms be given power to chart the course of housing and city development.

Under Laval's plan, a symposium of these officials would be set up on its campus here.

"It would be a place where the people who have the power can get the courage to make decisions,"

HELLYER SKEPTICAL

Mr. Hellyer and his colleagues were skeptical.

"A new super-government?" said Mr. Hellyer. "Thank you for an extraordinary suggestion."

Monday was the first day on the road for the group of seven investigators who will travel Canada until the end of November studying housing conditions.

It proved to be an uncertain start. Four members had to rely on a simultaneous translation of disorganized presentations to the afternoon hearing.

Much was lost in the process. The day had its abrupt contrasts. First stop for the members of the inquiry was made at Laval student residences worth $11,000,000. Then, after an audience at city hall with the mayor, the group spent an hour in St. Roch walking its narrow streets and finally trooping across several acres of dirt fill to the St. Charles River, where several municipalities dump sewage.

A knot of 39 residents from the old St. Roch district were waiting for the housing inquiry with signs asking Mr. Hellyer to end "40 years of waiting."

He was presented with a petition asking for the removal of a CP Rail right-of-way blocking the renewal scheme among the old two- and three-story buildings.

EXPLAINS DELAY

Mayor Lamontagne said earlier a city renewal study was completed in mid-1966 but a subsequent agreement between the city and Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. became void when the Quebec Housing Corp. was formed by the government.

Mr. Lamontagne said the city is awaiting decisions about getting rid of the railway and building main roads, but now it must funnel all its requests through the QHC.

The two housing agents should find faster ways to enable them to put their housing projects into action, he said.

Later, representatives of the St. Roch residents, whose salaries range between $2,000-$3,000, appeared at an afternoon hearing and talked about frustrating years waiting for the promised urban renewal project.

Group spokesman Raymond Parent said they want to launch co-operative housing, possibly with government subsidies, but not the kind of subsidies that are attached to family income.

He said the group's co-operative housing scheme could provide accommodation at $65 to $100 a month without subsidy because it would run without a profit.

The Hellyer group flew Monday night to Charlottetown, where a tour and another hearing were scheduled today.

AUSTRALIA WILL DELAY BUYING F-111

CANBERRA (CP) — Air Minister Gordon Freeth reported to Parliament today on the 11th crash of a U.S. F-111 fighter-bomber and said Australia would not accept the plane, "until the picture is clearer."

An F-111A crashed and burst into flames just short of the runway at Nellis Air Force Base in Las Vegas, Nev., Monday. The two pilots, an Australian and an American, parachuted to safety.

Australia has a contract to buy 24 F-111 planes. It was the ninth crash of an F-111A, the U.S. Air Force version of the $6,000,000 tactical fighter.

PASTORAL GUIDELINES ON ENCYCICAL PLANNED

WINNIPEG (CP) — Roman Catholic bishops in Canada are taking a positive approach to Pope Paul's encyclical—which includes a ban of artificial birth-control measures—and will issue a statement Thursday.

This was revealed Monday as 80 bishops from across Canada met at their semi-annual general assembly. The conference ends Friday.

Bishop Alexander Carter of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Canadian Catholic Conference president, said he hoped the statement for Canada's 8,500,000 Roman Catholics will cover the entire encyclical.

"I don't want it reduced to the question of birth control," he told a news conference.

Bishop Carter said Roman Catholics could not be blamed for singling out the birth control edict from the encyclical because it was a "concrete statement which affects them in their intimate life."

BY WHAT MEANS?
The major difference of opinion appeared to be that of means of birth control, he said. "There is nothing in the encyclical that says Catholics have to have large families."

The bishops, in their statement, will also try to clarify the binding nature of the encyclical, another conference spokesman said.

The submission, by the 350 members of the Western Canadian Priests Association, has been placed with other submissions before a commission established by the bishops to study the encyclical.

The commission is expected to draft a statement for consideration by the bishops. Its contents will not be made public.

Other questions to be considered include reinstatement of deacons in Canada, questions on the role of priests, on the role of the conference, jurisdiction for priests, care of immigrants, liturgy and bilingualism and a matter of catechism.

Bishop Carter said he presumed the conference will accept the reinstatement of deacons, a measure made necessary in other countries because of a shortage of priests.

Laymen are appointed deacons to assume some of the duties of priests.

CARDINAL SUMMONS PRIESTS TO MEETING

WASHINGTON — Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle has summoned all 130 pastors of churches in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Washington to a special meeting Wednesday at St. Patrick's Church here.

Letters to the pastors Monday, notifying them of the session, stressed the importance of their attending and said the gathering will deal with "extremely urgent matters," according to one source.

Although no further information was available on the agenda, Cardinal O'Boyle is expected to review aspects of the crisis over birth control and conscience with the senior priests.

The word about Double Distilled's unsurpassed value and flavor is really getting around. And frankly, we're a bit concerned, because success has been the ruin of many fine products. Can Double Distilled stand the strain? We think so. After all, it's held up perfectly for 60 years now. In all that time, our single aim has been to please the taste of British Columbians. We seem to be succeeding. And we're not about to change a good thing.

A London Life profile

Land developer

John Ferracuti explains how he protects his family and can double, and even triple, his money with London Life.

1. John Ferracuti is a partner in a successful construction company in Toronto. John really values what he learned about modern business methods at university.

"Today, you can't just put up a building and expect to make money," he says. "You have to analyse potential areas, their accessibility, public transport, shops, schools, and the kind of features people want in their homes. To be successful a business has to do an awful lot of research before investing any money."

3. "In my job there's the risk of serious injury," says John Ferracuti. "That's why for a small extra premium I added disability protection to my $25,000 policy. If I have an accident and become unable to work the premiums will be paid automatically."

John has also added another clause which allows him to buy more insurance regardless of his health or occupation. That's an important advantage of the Jubilee policy: it can be tailored to your personal requirements. That's why we call it "the flexible one."

2. "My father started me off with my first London Life policy when I was fourteen. Through the years I've seen those dividends coming in and I know that policy is a good investment."

"It's excellent collateral, too. When we were starting in business I needed some money and took the policy to the bank and got my requirements right on the spot. So, when I had a family and needed more protection I knew I'd get a good investment with another London Life policy."

Here are the facts about John Ferracuti's $5,000 Jubilee whole life policy purchased when he was 14. By age 65, $3,363 will have been paid in. But, if he leaves his dividends to accumulate, he will have $12,564* available. More than triple the amount paid in premiums!

Now the details for John's $25,000 Jubilee whole life policy purchased at age 27. By the time he is 65, John will have paid in $15,281. However, if his dividends were left to accumulate he would have $35,050* available. More than double the $15,281 paid in!

*These figures are made up of $3,215 ($5,000 policy) and $13,725 ($25,000 policy) in guaranteed cash value. The balance is in accumulated dividends based on the current scale. While they are not guaranteed, London Life for years has had one of the most outstanding records of dividend payments in North America.

4. "During the winter I referee Pee Wee league hockey games at the Etobicoke arena. Those youngsters can really move. I'm sure I end up getting as much exercise as they do!"

John Ferracuti went on to talk about life insurance and his own four-year-old boy.

"I've bought young Johnny a $10,000 Jubilee policy. The one my father bought me sure helped teach me how to handle money. I want to do the same for my boy."

To learn more about the advantages of life insurance for children, and to find out if you can double your money with London Life, talk to a Company representative.

He can show you how a Jubilee policy can provide protection and build up a nest egg for your later years at the same time.

You'll be pleasantly surprised to find that with the London Life Insurance Company you get more than you expected from life insurance.

A Job to Do

WHILE THE OTTAWA VISIT of Mr. Manlio Brosio, the secretary-general of NATO, has officially been described as "routine," there can be little doubt that his sudden arrival to talk to the Canadian government was the direct result of Prime Minister Trudeau's remarks in the Commons last week regarding Canada's NATO relationship. Whether or not Mr. Trudeau's words accurately reflected what he had in mind, his apparent hint last Wednesday that Canada would adopt a strictly technical and legal position if, for instance, West Germany were invaded by Russia, created alarm and protests among our NATO allies. Although Mr. Trudeau made haste under opposition questioning on Thursday to clarify his stand, and assure the House that "there is no ground for believing that Canada would fail to discharge in any way its obligation under the NATO treaty," there must still be a residue of concern in our allies' minds.

This is the more understandable in that Mr. Trudeau's comments were made against a background of active reconsideration of Canada's whole NATO position. This survey had been promised during the election campaign which returned Mr. Trudeau to office, and it had been under way before the Czechoslovakian crisis was precipitated by Russia's invasion of its neighbor. Clearly, that invasion greatly changed the East-West situation and restored in some measure the military basis that had originally prompted the creation of NATO 20 years ago.

That is not to say that the Soviet Union is likely to launch an attack on the West. The Czechoslovakian clamp-down was primarily to restore a bulwark in the defence line against the West, not to prepare a jumping-off point for invasion of Western Europe. But Moscow has deliberately added to the uneasy atmosphere of Europe by belligerent rumblings about its right to intervene in West Germany under certain circumstances, and its continued deployment of large forces.

These actions, of course, could well be an example of the time-honored practice of all dictatorial governments: to stir up a fancied foreign threat in order to divert attention from very questionable domestic doings. But in any case they do not create a climate conducive to talk of reducing NATO commitments. It is true that the Canadian purpose has been presented as a review or reappraisal, rather than an intention to reduce Canada's NATO participation, but the implication had been that reduction would probably be the result.

There is, however, a strong opinion in Ottawa contrary to this concept, and with the Czechoslovakian development now adding weight, this opinion should carry much greater influence with the Prime Minister. To such expert advice has been added the clear wish of Britain, France and the United States that Canada refrain from a NATO reduction at this time. The prospect, indeed, suggests an increased commitment by NATO partners to match the increased prominence of the Warsaw Pact's military posture.

For a government determined to cut national expenses, a pro-NATO decision may be an agonizing one, but it is difficult to see how Canada can retreat now. Withdrawal of some of our NATO forces would be widely interpreted as a deliberate weakening of the Western defences, and a possible lead for some of the economically-pressed partners to reduce their contributions. As some Ottawa experts have phrased it: "Let Canada not be the first domino to topple."

If this country has a mission for world peace, it will not be advanced by weakening our voice in NATO and world councils, and this would be one inevitable result of a reduction in our NATO support at this time. NATO is much more than a simple line of token defence against Russian aggression: it is a strong stabilizing factor for all of Europe, including the function of preventing a direct confrontation of strength between the continent's two most powerful nations—Russia and West Germany.

Canada should make it clear that for the present at least, the NATO fabric will not be weakened.

Rebel Mowat

GEORGE "REBEL" MOWAT, one of Victoria's greatest goodwill ambassadors, died Sunday half a world away from the city he loved, but it would not be correct to say that he died away from his friends. For people were Rebel's lifelong concern, and everywhere there were people he had friends.

As a bus driver on scenic tours here for nearly fifty years, Rebel talked to literally tens of thousands of visitors and tourists and left them with a vivid appreciation of the history and beauties of Victoria, along with a genuine admiration for his own unique character. No newsboy was too humble, no cabinet minister or tycoon too great, to be admitted to Rebel's genial camaraderie, while, to become a partner in his bluff, humorous sallies was an honor long recalled. A decade after encountering him, tourists would return to remember and be remembered. Rebel had a capacity for humanity that was a rich treasure in a world too often lacking it. He let no man be an island.

The world tour which had been the culminating triumph of his career has been halted unfinished in an Irish hospital, and this community feels a collective loss in Rebel's sudden death. His qualities of simplicity, genuineness and compassion were of a high order. He was a diamond in the rough, and the roughness itself became a solid virtue, an engaging part of the man. We have lost a good citizen who cannot be replaced.

Putting a Bold Face on It

THE LATEST SOVIET FEAT IN sending a spacecraft around the moon, and current American preparations for prolonged orbits of the earth by a space crew, both point to the gradual approach of the space race to the climax of putting a man on the moon.

While both nations profess a scientific detachment regarding the nature of the contest, there is no doubt whatever as to the vast prestige that will accrue to the country which first successfully achieves a manned moon landing. And the honor that is won, will probably mark the peak of space achievement for a long time to come. Landing on the moon alive is credible to the layman, but the step beyond our lunar satellite will be a vast one. The planets are at much greater distances in space, and breaking out of our planetary system into the indescribable reaches of the cosmos must probably remain a dream for many generations to come.

In the meantime the ground-work, as it were, is being steadily carried out. The feats of orbiting the earth or of sending unmanned vehicles to the moon do not now command the biggest headlines—and this fact is in a way a measure of the advances being made. But the big prize—a man on the moon—will warrant the largest type, and at the moment it appears to be a toss-up as to whether it will be Russian or American.

JUGGLING THE MIDDLE EAST

U.S. Campaign Issues Range Far Afield

By RICHARD PURSER

UNITED States presidential election campaigns are playing political football with two international issues

Purser

Israeli diplomats into action at the United Nations Security Council, with the usual disappointing results that served only to increase Israeli militancy.

Egyptian militancy has been increasing, with outward signs being further evacuation of Egyptian civilians from the Canal area and a military buildup west of the Canal. President Nasser made a speech on Sept. 14 that disturbed diplomats. Opinion varied as to whether it represented a genuine hardening of Egyptian resolve or only a desperate attempt by Col. Nasser to hang on to power suspected to be failing. But the possibility for mischief was equal in either case.

After Occupied Lands

Col. Nasser said that the main hope for the present was the marshalling of Arab resources to liberate the lands occupied by Israel during the war of June, 1967.

While this may not formally indicate a speedup in the Arabs' confrontation timetable, and while a confrontation at this time would seem illogical from their point of view, officials point to the tense mood in Cairo and recall the habit of Middle East disasters of arising suddenly and in defiance of logic.

There has been considerable replenishment by the Soviet bloc of military equipment lost by the Arabs last year, but it is not felt likely here that the Arabs could at this time show significant improvement in armed forces training, morale, leadership or combat effectiveness.

U.S. domestic politics, however, contain a factor that could help spur the Arabs (especially the Egyptians, in their present mood) to rash action.

Col. Nasser, in his speech, accused Richard Nixon and Hubert Humphrey of seeking Jewish votes at the expense of the Arab cause. This is an old line, which continually fails to recognize that the U.S. is morally committed to the survival of Israel regardless of the Jewish vote.

Dangerously Sensitive

But the fact remains that both presidential candidates and the president himself have played politics with a dangerously sensitive issue — sale of supersonic jets to Israel.

Both candidates favored sale of the phantom F-4S which Israel has been seeking since last fall. Immediate sale of the planes has been urged on President Johnson on the grounds that they would help deter an Arab attack or miscalculation. It is a valid point. Since France refused to sell Israel the Mirage jets for which it had contracted, only the U.S. Phantoms can compete with the new Soviet MiG-21S supplied to Egypt.

Yet Mr. Johnson is resisting the sale, although the U.S. has sent or agreed to send 54 Patton tanks, two squadrons of F-104 Starfighters and $100 million in additional arms to Jordan. His resistance — he has not said "no," but only avoided making a decision — is of long-standing duration. He and Israeli Prime Minister Levi Eshkol said in a communique early last January that the U.S. "would keep under active and sympathetic consideration the defensive needs of Israel."

Covering Inactivity

The White House last week stood on these words, which are a well-known diplomatic cover for doing nothing. The unofficial rationale is that the U.S. hopes for some Arab-Israeli progress either when special UN Middle Eastern representative Gunnar Jarring meets with Middle Eastern officials in New York during the opening sessions of the General Assembly later this month, or during a Moscow-Washington summit conference of which a U.S. arms sale to Israel, it was held, would jeopardize the chances of success. In other words, an apparent temporary Israeli military disadvantage (when factors of training, morale, and efficiency are added, the U.S. doubts it is a real disadvantage) might be parlayed into an eventual peace agreement.

It is a tenuous line of reasoning, and provides an easy area for Mr. Humphrey to strike off along a line independent of the president — something he has had difficulty doing on Vietnam.

Mr. Humphrey and Mr. Nixon are in agreement on this point, and it is Mr. Nixon who has provided the best line of counter-reasoning to date. While agreeing that peace in the Middle East is a long-range problem, he said, the free world must meanwhile maintain a balance of power to deter would-be aggressors. "Certainly a balance of power is a short-term solution; but when survival is at stake, short-term solutions are necessary."

As interesting as this debate may be, its introduction into the U.S. political arena is of questionable value. The great fear following the Humphrey-Nixon pronouncements is that the jumpy Arabs may come to believe that Israel will be supplied with Phantoms after the next president takes office, but not before, and so may be tempted to take action before.

FROM WASHINGTON

One Can Hear the Axes Chopping Away

By JOSEPH ALSOP

THE chief promoters of the sharp rightward turn the United States seems likely to make are quite plainly the extremists of the left, both black and white. Their unbridled behavior has in turn been greatly encouraged by the sentimental permissiveness that is the current fashion in the intellectual-liberal establishment in the universities, in the press and elsewhere.

Alsop

The effect of all this on average voters can be easily gauged by anyone who studies the strategy and tactics of Richard M. Nixon's campaign, or listens to the cheers that greet George C. Wallace's viciously anti-intellectual ranting. The question is what price will have to be paid by these chief promoters of our prospective rightward turn.

Renewed Confrontation

A good place to look for an answer is New York City. Here the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) (a grossly misnamed group) have started another "confrontation" with Columbia University. And another, even more dangerous "confrontation," with extremely nasty racist overtones, is in progress between the teachers' union and the Ocean-Hill-

Brownsville demonstration school district.

Let us look first at the lower-level "confrontation." All three of New York's demonstration school districts, originally financed by the Ford Foundation, are in poverty areas. All desperately need huge injections of federal funds, to provide the much improved schooling that is the only hope of their disadvantaged youngsters.

Title I of the great Elementary and Secondary Education Act created the machinery for providing such federal funds. At present, available Title I money is a beggarly $1.1 billion. Perhaps 10 times that amount will eventually be needed each year to achieve a nationally effective solution to the cancerous ghetto school problem.

For Future Investigators

What, then, will be done about this matter by the kind of Congress we can now expect? For the congressional investigators one can foresee in the future, it is quite likely there is some pay dirt in the Ocean Hill-Brownsville demonstration school district, where the trouble in New York now centers.

Go to another of these districts, IS 201, however, and there is no question about the pay dirt. In IS 201, a leading figure is Herman Ferguson, a leader of the Revolutionary Action Movement which takes its inspiration from Peking and calls for guerrilla war in the ghettos. Ferguson was recently convicted of

No Change By Hanoi

Portland Oregonian

Neither Hubert Humphrey's optimism nor Richard Nixon's avoidance of comment on the Paris nonpeace talks obscures the cold reality. In the several months since Averell Harriman sat down with the North Vietnamese envoys for weekly meetings in Paris, there has not been the slightest change in Hanoi's demands for peace in South Vietnam.

Premier Pham Van Dong restated these demands recently: "The United States must unconditionally stop its bombing and all other acts of war against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam. Only after that can other matters be discussed. The U.S. must withdraw all U.S. and other satellite troops from Vietnam. The U.S. must recognize the National Liberation Front as the sole representative of the Vietnamese people in South Vietnam, and must talk to the National Liberation Front about all problems concerning South Vietnam."

Hanoi's spokesmen also have stated flatly that an end to U.S. bombing in the southern panhandle of North Vietnam "would not be enough" to move its envoys in Paris to get down to cases and talk about peace terms. Hanoi obviously is holding out for a U.S. offer to meet all its principal demands.

Fatuous

In the light of this it is fatuous for Mr. Humphrey to say that Vietnam peace talks "may very well start before I become president." That is, unless he is conceding Mr. Nixon's election. It is misleading for him to say "we could start to remove some of the American forces from Vietnam in early 1969 or late 1968," unless he means surrender to Hanoi's demands or has evidence of a coming military victory unseen by President Johnson.

President Johnson, at least, is trying to keep the vice-president from going off his trolley and misrepresenting U.S. policy. "No one can predict" when "violence subsides and our men can return from South Vietnam," he said in correcting the record confused by Mr. Humphrey.

And it may be necessary, before the Nov. 5 election, for Mr. Nixon to state whether as president he would continue the fruitless talks in Paris, as well as what other steps he has in mind to resolve the Vietnam war and establish peace. He will not be able much longer to avoid a full-scale exposition of his Vietnam war position on the basis that the nonalks in Paris are getting anywhere. They are not.

conspiracy to murder Roy Wilkins, Whitney Young and other Negro moderates.

While the conviction is being appealed, Ferguson continues to play a major role in his school district. The line he is taking is sufficiently indicated by his explanation to a visitor that he wants the teaching at IS 201 to counteract "the Anglo-Semitic conspiracy" to conceal the key role, in all of Western thought and progress, of "the Universities of Timbuktu." There are also troubling reports that young "Black Guards" are being recruited in the school.

Just what on earth, then, can anyone suppose an extreme right-wing Congress will make of such goings-on in federally-aided schools? Can anyone suppose that an investigation or two, centering on people like Herman Ferguson, will fail to block for years to come the expansion of Title I spending that is the sole hope of the ghetto school children? Just who, in short, has been fooling whom?

University Financing

The case of the universities is even more immediately perilous, furthermore. As of now, the federal government is contributing $3.4 billion per annum to support the U.S. university system. Of this, $1.4 billion goes to pay for research; $1.15 billion goes to undergraduate and graduate students aid in various categories, and the rest, a large sum, helps to keep the universities operating, and thereby reduces the educational costs of the mainly middle-class student bodies.

McGeorge Bundy of the Ford Foundation has nonetheless warned the country that the federal government is going to have to do a lot more to aid the universities. Meanwhile, the immediate response of the existing, relatively moderate congress to last year's student turbulence has been to cut off all grants to students involved in such activities as the SDS assaults on the Columbia administration.

Hackles Raised

But in the extreme right-wing Congress that must now be expected, who can suppose the thing will end there? Along with the SDS, the left-wing politically active academics raise every right-wing hackle.

The peculiar combination of the SDS types and their professional sympathizers and/or tolerators will again make a field day for the congressional investigators of the future. And after that, one can already hear the axes chopping away at the universities' federal aid.

It reminds one of Moliere's play about an antihero, Georges Dandin. After poor Georges has done everything to make a mess for himself, the last line is: "You ask for it, Georges Dandin."

Looking Back

From the Times, Sept. 24, 1968.

Admiral Kingsmill returned to the city this afternoon on the CGS Kestrel after inspecting the northern harbors and fishing grounds of Prince Rupert. He told the Times that one of the features that had impressed him was the number and success of the American fishing steamers in contrast with the few that are sent from British Columbia.

He said there was no reason why Victoria should not participate to a much larger extent in fishing in these northern waters.

MARKED for READING TO DARKNESS

To a countryman ploughed lands are history, drama, beauty. There is no sight more moving than the reflection of a setting sun along the crests of smoothly-turned soil as far as the eye can see — long lines of yellow light, fading slowly to red. So it holds, for a moment of magic, and the damp smell of new-turned furrows hangs sweetly in the air; the hiss of moisture in the soil pervades.

Israeli Hopes for a Lasting Peace Now Dismissed as 'Wishful Thinking'

JERUSALEM — In June, 1967, at the end of a victorious war, the Israelis talked glowingly of peace. It was to be a generous one.

Except for the city of Jerusalem, the conquered territories were to be returned to the vanquished in confidence that Israel's future security could rest on a peace treaty negotiated directly with the Arab states and providing for demilitarized zones around the borders.

Today, 15 months later, that attitude has changed beyond recognition. Public opinion about what can be expected and the stance that Israel must take has crystallized into something so concrete as to be referred to as "the national consensus."

Occupation Needed

Its premise is that real peace is beyond hope. Its conclusion is that nothing short of territorial occupation can provide security.

The old notion conceived in a period of euphoria, is now seen as a gross miscalculation bred of wishful thinking.

The immediate post-war assumption was that with the passage of time the beaten Arabs would decide to call quits to the 50-year-old Palestinian conflict, liquidate it, turn back to the cultivation of their own gardens and resolve to live in neighborly association with the Zionist state.

A "Palestinian entity" would come into being on the west bank and, like the other Arab states, would see that its self-interest was to end the old grudge, accept the realities and co-exist peacefully.

Ruefully, the Israelis now claim predictive accuracy only to the extent that a "Palestinian entity" has indeed been created as a consequence of the six-day war. But it is an entity adamant in the resolve never to make peace with Israel. That resolve, stronger than ever before, is at the core of the policy of all other Middle East Arab states.

In coming to this analysis, the Israelis may be over reacting to their erstwhile wishful thinking. But those who try to be most objective now gloomily conclude that the gap between the objectives of the two sides is unbridgeable.

Israel will settle for nothing less than a peace in which the Arabs agree, in direct negotiations, on new borders, recognize the legitimacy of the state and, in fact, write into their fight against it.

Moreover, as protection against any subsequent Arab denunciation of the treaty the Israelis insist it provide for their land access to the mouth of the Gulf of Aqaba, retention of the Golan Heights in what was Syria and for two large tongues of land curving like lips of a crescent into Jordan's west bank all for purposes of military defence.

As the hardest headed and most objective Israeli experts agree, the Arabs on their part cannot for the foreseeable future accept even the first set of conditions.

A realization more subconscious and unspoken than concretely spelled out, is dawning among Israeli policy-makers that Arab opposition to the existence of Israel is politically unshakable and is based on an abiding profound and by Arab lights deeply patriotic and moral matter of principle.

Military Strength

The national consensus accordingly is that since there can be no real peace for a generation or more to come Israel's only salvation is the strongest possible military defence.

For that it must hold the territories it now occupies or, if it ever comes to the point of a negotiated settlement it must provide for new frontiers much more secure than those at the outbreak of the 1967 war.

But in fact, there is now little talk here about new borders, because the prospect of coming to negotiations seems so remote.

Rather the majority view is that Israel will and must continue its present occupation—all of it.

The most hopeful notion is that every occupation places the nation in such a strong military posture as to prevent the Arabs from attacking again.

Inner Conviction

A less hopeful thought and perhaps a more realistic one is that the point must come when the Arabs' inner convictions and political necessities force them to fight again regardless of their chances of success, but that they will once again be defeated.

The implications of a continuation for many years of the status quo are only slightly less miserable than the implications of another war.

For the Arabs, it means that Israel will consolidate, particularly in the economic sphere, its occupation of their lands detaching their populations more and more in all respects but the emotional ones from their brother Arabs.

For the Israelis, it means a sullen, implacably hostile and undigested mass of aliens in its midst, a continuation of infiltration, terrorist attacks and border clashes, eye-gouging and groin-kneeing in the United Nations, diplomatic agonies in a world never viscerally convinced that Israel's case is wholly just.

Each side of course wants a liquidation of the conflict, but the Arabs by liquidating the Zionist state, and the Israelis by liquidating opposition to its existence. The gap does indeed seem unbridgeable.

Labor Relations Not 'Wild West' Despite Rand Views

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

The key recommendation of the Rand Report is the set of restrictions which it would place upon free collective bargaining.

The nature of these proposed restrictions is determined by the conception Mr. Justice Rand has of the present function of collective bargaining.

To Mr. Justice Rand the expression "free collective bargaining" means that the negotiations between union and management are free "from rules of society." Here, before all the books and articles which we had read on the subject assumed that it meant something else.

They all took it for granted that the expression described the arrangement in which the union and the company came to an agreement to sign a mutual understanding on wages and working conditions without the state dictating the terms of the agreement but dictating all of the rules by which the two sides went through the process of reaching agreement.

We have already described at length how the commissioner is obsessed and misled by what he misconceives to be "history." At this point he is misled again by a misconception. He finds an historical analogy to modern collective bargaining:

"That is precisely what individuals demanded and resorted to in England from the sixteenth century to the sixteenth century, and in some respects, later, to settle all manner of disputes. What with the Ordeal, Trial by Battle, Trial by Compurgators, any means, almost, except the judgment of one's peers, was acceptable."

(Fourth of Series)

With great respect we must point out that the ordeal, which was a religious test, and its attendant forms of trial, were imposed by society upon the unfortunate people.

But the commissioner is imprisoned in his patronizing and ill-informed compulsion of historical necessity. Labor-management relations are a High Noon drama between two lawless bands (or perhaps one lawless band and a management forced unwillingly to fight it out on Main St.), while all decent people rush for cover.

And now the forces of justice, and those good grey judges who have been busy at work in the noble cause since the sixteenth century, are going to bring the varmints within the law.

Completely ignored in this is the fact that labor and management already have to accept government regulation, both in the form of special laws and in a multitude of laws of the land, at almost every point of contact. A space already occupied to the point where it is cramped is declared to be a vacuum, and new devices will be put into it.

The primary one is selected compulsory arbitration, and it is of such a nature that it would terminate collective bargaining as we have known it. The report proposes:

"When a strike or lockout has continued for 90 days the union or employer, undertaking to accept it, may at any time thereafter request an award by the Tribunal which the Tribunal may make."

If the other party rejects the award the Tribunal may make it binding if it feels the rejecting party has acted "unreasonably." Knowing arbitrators as we do, that would be in almost all cases.

There are other routes to compulsory arbitration. They all have this in common: They would reduce the pressures upon union and management to reach an agreement, and they would

POMPIDOU ... protects purity

France Has Obsession About Language Value

By BERNARD KAPLAN

PARIS — What exactly is the French government's high commission for the defence and expansion of the French language whose rapporteur general, Philippe Rosillon, has been accused by Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau of a cloak-and-daggerish performance in Manitoba?

At a glance, the commission, housed in a reconditioned state office building on Paris' Quai Voltaire, looks like the most innocuous of government bodies, a sort of Gallic version of the British Council or the United States Information Service.

This is not quite accurate, however, because it actually overlaps with other French agencies which more closely resemble the departments nearly all big countries maintain nowadays to keep up a front, culturally speaking.

Another difference stems from the almost obsessional emphasis the French put on their language as a language and the crucial link they make between it and the degree to which their own national prestige flourishes in the world at large.

It would be hard to conceive, at least with a straight face, of an official committee to defend and expand English or Russian or Chinese (maybe less so the latter). But, in terms of the way the French have always been accustomed to think of these things, it makes perfect sense.

The commission was created in 1966 when the notion of a resurgent Francophonie was beginning to reach its height here. Its chief purpose, according to the then prime minister, Georges Pompidou, was to battle against the influences—most notably Franglaise—which were corrupting the purity of the mother tongue.

The connection with French Canada, or, at any rate, Quebec, was made explicit. Discussions with Quebec authorities had disclosed that the corrosive influences on spoken and even written French in Canada was among their sorest problems.

Under the newly concluded cultural and educational compact with Quebec, Pompidou declared that the high commission would co-operate closely in the work of cleansing Canadian French of its impurities.

But, in fact, not much was heard after this from the high commission. Most of Quebec's dealings continued to be with the cultural section of the foreign office, the ministry of education and whichever ministry could best help deal with a specific problem.

The commission actually seems to have been established for two other reasons. As an agency attached to the prime minister's office, it provided the latter with the means of intervening in what was becoming an increasingly important aspect of government policy, but which up to then had been pretty much the guarded preserve of the foreign ministry.

The Elise Palace didn't need a new government body in order to make its influence felt, but undoubtedly welcomed it on the theory that the more official concern with "cultural diplomacy" the better.

There can be no question that President de Gaulle has always correlated France's political status to the French tongue's international position as an economic, political and intellectual tool. After France's liberation in 1944, the creation of a "directorate-general of cultural affairs," the forerunner of all of today's agencies, and the laying down of a long-term "cultural plan," complementary to the government's economic plan, were among his first acts.

The need was also felt for a body that could deal rather more freely and informally with non-government organizations in other countries—universities, scientific groups and so on—than readily could the cultural section of the foreign ministry. The aim, indeed, seems to have been to avoid just the sort of incident that Rosillon's presence in Manitoba created.

The commission did not replace any existing cultural agency nor was it given a coordinating function. It is regarded as a consultative body, but close enough to the ear of the government's top figures to have weight. There is only a small operating staff, but, as might be expected, the list of members of the commission itself reads like a microcosm of French intellectual and artistic life.

As rapporteur general, Rosillon's principal job, officially, is to present the commission's recommendations and studies to the prime minister's office for action. But, as its chief permanent official, he is its mainspring, as permanent officials have a way of being in such organizations.

Except that, at one time, he was an active partisan of Algeria Française (and, as such, a critic of de Gaulle), Rosillon's background lacks anything of a James Bond burnish. A graduate of the École Nationale d'Administration, he is a long-time civil servant who has dabbled in politics, as civil servants here are allowed to do, with inconspicuous success. "Patrie et Progrès," the pro-separatist movement to which he belonged, was a tiny ginger group originally formed to support the French settlers in Algeria. Rosillon's political activities were considered unimportant.

The commission makes a distinction between three types of Francophone communities: those like Quebec and the French African states where "French is the mother tongue or the official language," those where it is the principal language used in education and, finally, areas where it is neither one nor the other but which are the homes of substantial numbers of French-speaking people.

The commission's own map notes only three places where the latter situation prevails—the New England states of the U.S., the former French Indian colony of Pondichery and Canada.

It would be in such areas that the commission might well consider itself most needed, given its terms of references to "establish the necessary liaison with competent private organizations, notably in the field of cultural and technical co-operation."

This would explain, if not necessarily justify, Rosillon's activities in Manitoba as well as earlier in the Maritimes. Whether or not he was acting on his personal initiative, as the French authorities have claimed, or conducting the considered policy of his government remains an unanswered and probably unanswerable question.

Certainly, the handsome welcome given here earlier this year to the unofficial French-speaking mission from the Maritimes suggests that the government would not have disavowed the fruits of Rosillon's labors in Manitoba.

Quebec Has Obligation To Rights of Minority

By CLAUDE RYAN
Le Devoir

The more one listens to those who flock to the defence of the demonstrators of St. Leonard, the more one discovers that many among them are not seeking a solution to a practical problem but rather the introduction of a more or less radical policy of unilingualism for Quebec.

As much as one can be sympathetic toward certain specific demands that tend to seek a more genuine equality, one must remain critical of opinions that, in effect, deny the very spirit of the Laurendeau-Dunton report on the official languages of Canada.

One finds in the bilingualism and biculturalism report's general introduction these important observations: "There are many reasons, the first moral, against considering ethnic difference, either by group or by origin, as a basic principle for shaping society."

"This would tend to create closed-membership groups with newcomers condemned to remain outsiders; accidents of ancestry would be emphasized and rigid barriers would divide people. Legislation based on ethnic origin or ethnic group would be a direct denial of the principle that all men are equal before the law."

In a later chapter the commission recommends without equivocation "that the right of Canadian parents to have their children educated in the official language of their choice be recognized in the educational systems..." The commission stipulates only that "the degree of implementation to depend on the concentration of the minority population."

Paradoxically, these norms were defined principally on the basis of the centuries-old experience of Quebec. The commissioners themselves acknowledged: "In our thinking on this subject we have largely followed the Quebec model."

The Quebec experience thus forms one of the cornerstones of the report. Remove this experience and you do away with none of the fundamental rights advocated by the commissioners, but you singularly diminish the historic scope of their document.

We recognize, on the other hand, serious problems presented for Quebec by the demographic evolution of recent years.

Quebec is the only French-speaking society in North America. An island lost in an English-speaking complex, it is subjected to colossal pressures. Let the Quebecois snap on the radio or the TV, let him buy a periodical other than that which he reads customarily, let him deal with a neighbor or travel a bit, let him just take a little air, and he is plunged into a sea of English culture.

In Quebec itself, economic life is very largely a colony of English-speaking people. This acts as an extraordinary attraction to a great number of Quebecois in a direction opposed to the tradition and cultural aspirations of the majority.

Can a government elected by a heavy French-Canadian majority rest content with pure linguistic liberalism in such a situation? Can it abandon the fate of a community gravely beleaguered in its own household to the play of a competition that in the long run can only favor the stronger?

To ask the question is to answer it. No real equality has a chance of existing if a reasonable priority is not accorded to French in the linguistic policy of the Quebec government. What remains is to reconcile this priority with the equality of which the Laurendeau-Dunton commission has spoken.

languages in the public services; liberty of each citizen to choose one or the other linguistic community.

Within these bounds remains an infinity of means at the disposal of the state to give concrete priority to French. All this must be made the object of deep and objective studies, but one can at once indicate a few directions:

With clear recognition of the free choice of parents in education, a more vigorous policy of information and encouragement in favor of the French school could be pursued with new Canadians and even English speakers.

The Quebec government could require the English schools of Quebec to extend considerably their teaching of French.

It could even require that a reasonable mastery of the priority language become a condition of academic promotion. That is already the practice in other provinces. Why should what is simply good sense in Ontario not be the same in Quebec?

Measures could be taken to promote better French usage in economic life, especially advertising.

One hears of making French the language of work in business and industry. Before legislating, the state would do well to inquire carefully. There are enterprises ripe for change. Others, because of their complexity and the continental scale of their transactions, must not be subjected to a broad discipline that could not be applied without considerable losses.

The Quebec state should define and practice a more rigorous policy of French priority in its own affairs, internal as well as external.

The Laurendeau-Dunton commission addressed some scarcely-veiled reproaches to the Quebec government in this regard. The latter can and must exercise leadership in the promotion of French. It sins seven times daily in this domain.

Zoom with room.

That's a tough combination to beat for any car, at any price. Most of the more expensive G.T. types have lots of zoom, but no room.

The new Fiat 124 Sport Coupe has both.

Take the zoom. It has the performance of a genuine sports car. Power comes from a ninety-six horsepower engine with twin overhead cams, 5-bearing crankshaft and an aluminum head.

Transmission is a beautiful, smooth all-synchro 4-on-the-floor with 5-speed optional. And when you want to stop, four wheel power-assisted disc-brakes do it with ease. Smooth and fast.

Now about room. (There's plenty.) No squeezing into this beauty. There are four deep-cushioned contour bucket seats. (The front seats recline and adjust fully.) And we mean four real-size seats with a view for every member of the family.

Inside, the styling is something else again. Padded dashboard; wood-grain panelling; racing wheel; tachometer; central console controls for ventilation and heating; plus variable speed windshield wipers. (And many more fine features that are included at no extra cost, but have to be seen.) One look and you wouldn't believe this beautiful S.C. only costs $3,445.00*.

But, it does. And for about a hundred dollars more there's the Fiat 124 Sport Spider with 5-on-the-floor.

It has everything the Sport Coupe has, but with a little less room and a little more zoom. (A real honey of a sports car for the swinger.)

So make a trip to your nearest Fiat Dealer and have a demonstration drive in the new Fiat 124 S.C. or S.S. You'll find that action speaks louder than words.

If you've got the time, we've got cars with the zoom. And the room. FIAT

Student Housing Shortage Eased by City Residents

The near-crisis housing situation for students returning to the University of Victoria has eased this week.

Pleas last week from the university and area mayors resulted in many calls from persons offering apartments or rooms to the student housing service.

Most students who had not found accommodation by registration time last week were settled in by Monday.

Mrs. Dianna Caleb, co-ordinator of student housing, said a fresh list of available housing was published Friday and offers were still coming into her office.

Married students, the object of much concern because of the lack of low-cost apartments, have found apartments or been offered motel units as a temporary measure, Mrs. Caleb said.

REASONABLE PRICES
Housing offered has been in a reasonable price range, less than $100, she said.

However, late registrants are expected at the university throughout this week and may require additional rooms.

Other students who are dissatisfied with the accommodation they have, may come to the office looking for better rooms for another month or so.

Line Held On Grants To Arts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council plans to hold its appropriations for the arts in the fiscal year starting next April 1 to the same $9,100,000 it earmarked for them this year, it was announced.

Peter M. Dwyer, associate director, said in a statement it warned the council's major beneficiaries "some months ago" that it would hold the line on grants in the arts in line with government policy.

The council's total grants program for 1968-69 was $21,000,000, an increase of $4,100,000 from the fiscal year that ended March 31 this year. Of this, $9,100,000 was earmarked for the arts, principally music and the theatre.

"The arts have not been singled out in any way for special reductions," Mr. Dwyer said in a statement. "It is simply that the general run of government expenditures is being held next year at the current year's level."

Stalin Returns As War Hero In Soviet Epic

MOSCOW (AP) — Joseph Stalin, in political oblivion since de-Stalinization began in 1956, is making a partial comeback as the hero of new Soviet movie on the Second World War.

The film, now being shot at Moscow's Mosfilm Studios, stars three little-known Soviet actors who bear startling likenesses to Stalin, President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the United States and Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain.

The three-part movie, entitled Liberation of Europe, portrays Stalin as a war hero, continuing the quiet official campaign to restore the dictator's respectability, at least as a military leader. Stalin died in 1953.

Soviet theoretical journals and some newspapers have published articles praising Stalin's wartime role, but the new movie is the first effort to rehabilitate him on a mass scale.

Home Are the Hunters After Night in the Bush

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni hunter reported missing walked safely from the woods 35 miles northwest of this community Monday. Sven Svenson was the object of a 16-man ground search.

A Victoria hunter, Jack Adamson, walked from woods near Campbell River earlier Monday after being missing almost 24 hours.

DUNCAN — Demolition of the combined agricultural hall-armory on Cowichan Band property in downtown Duncan is to be completed today, said Mayor Jim Quaife.

Plans call for establishment of a modern shopping centre on the site adjacent to the city parking lot.

Demolition of the building and the week-long job of clearing the land will cost $1,500. Cowichan Chief Dennis Alphonse said.

Cost of the project is being shared by the band, Duncan council and a number of local businessmen.

DUNCAN — Chip truck drivers will get 23 cents an hour more and flatdeck lumber drivers 18 cents in contracts approved by Duncan IWA local 1-80.

Firms involved in the contracts are Arrow Bulk Carriers and Harsey Transport. Drivers will now receive $3.42 an hour.

NANAIMO — John Piluk, 57, of Nanaimo, was fined $500 Monday after pleading guilty to defrauding the provincial social welfare department of $630. He was collecting welfare while working in a logging camp, court was told.

PORT ALBERNI — An inquest will be held Oct. 7 into the Sept. 18 death of Allan Owen Bastian, 36, of 631 11th Ave., in a logging accident at Franklin River.

RCMP said Mr. Bastian and Ron Hanna, 25, of 605 Crescent, were felling a tree when the tree's crown toppled and struck them both.

Mr. Hanna is reported in satisfactory condition in Nanaimo Regional General Hospital.

PORT ALBERNI — The Comox-Alberni New Democratic Party's federal constituency association will remain in readiness for a byelection, former MP Tom Barrett said Sunday.

Pending a Supreme Court hearing of a petition filed by Mr. Barnett contesting the validity of the election of Liberal MP Richard Durante last June, the federal constituency association will remain on a "war footing."

The petition alleges that some service personnel who should have been included in the armed services vote cast their ballots illegally in the Comox area.

Anticipating initial court action on the petition shortly, Mr. Barnett said "we accept Mr. Durante as the acting MP in the meantime."

2-Year Wait Before Vote On College

DUNCAN — The department of education will support a referendum on a regional college here, but not for two years.

The college must operate for that time in temporary quarters, Cowichan school board was told Monday night.

Jack Whitlam, chairman of the regional college council, said sites were now being studied, including the old hospital buildings at Nanaimo and Duncan. The college will open next September.

A referendum would be held as soon as the two years were up so the college could move out of temporary quarters, he said.

Information about enrolment, types of courses and buildings could be gathered during that time to set up a tailored program for the area.

GRANTS OFFERED

The board was told the provincial government would not support the college directly, but would give a grant to the districts supporting the college to help meet their expenses.

The cost of operating the college will be $1,500 per student with a starting cost from January to September of $200,000. Starting population would be about 400, with provincial participation of 45 per cent of cost.

Costs for 1969 will be about $600,000, of which the province would pay $270,000. Cost to local school boards will be the remaining $330,000 less about $60,000 in fees.

The college is expected to be operating in permanent quarters by 1972. It will be within six miles of Nanaimo.

'Go Climb a Tree' Logger Tells Wife

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Connie Johnson, petite brunette wife of a Vancouver Island logger, strapped on 14 pounds of climbing equipment and spurs, pulled on a pair of thick work gloves, cinched her rope belt around an 80-foot spar tree and began racing her husband to the top.

With a 40-foot handicap, she finished the climb up and down in 47 seconds. Her husband, who had to climb the entire pole, took 50 seconds for the round trip.

It was her first climbing appearance at the Festival of Forestry, held annually here at the Pacific National Exhibition.

She stands only five feet, 1 1/2 inches tall and weighs just 110 pounds, but can compete with the best of loggers on a hand-

'Pressure Placed On Forests'

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert J. Orange, MP for the North West Territories, Monday told the 13th session of the International Poplar Commission that Canada's great forest resources cannot be expected to meet indefinitely the growing world demands for wood.

The parliamentary secretary to the minister of energy, mines and resources told experts assembled here from 15 countries — some from Japan and Australia — that the doubling of Canada's population in the last 37 years is "placing pressure on our forests for recreation, wildlife habitat and protection of vital water resources."

He said "Canada has been generously endowed with poplars" which have many advantages because they make a light demand on the earth and are easily propagated.

"Because the poplar forms the largest part of our hardwood trees, we have to be concerned with its greater utilization, its protection and improvement," Mr. Orange said.

The poplar commission, an agency of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization, is meeting until Saturday and will deal with diseases and hybridization of poplars.

U.S. Opposes Gold Price Support

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States served notice on speculators and gold-mining countries today that it remains opposed to any scheme to support the private market price of gold.

In a major address to the Forging Industry Association annual conference, Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler said: "We will not accede to any proposal that puts a floor under the private market, there by assuring the speculators that have built up their hoards of gold that they may unload it at no less than the monetary price."

Fowler's remarks came a few days before the economic and financial leaders of more than 100 countries meet here for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

The leaders are expected to discuss a plan proposed by West Germany for the official purchase of newly-mined gold if and when the free market price falls to the monetary price of $35 U.S. an ounce.

The United States has consistently opposed such plans on grounds that by putting a floor under the private market, the existence of the two-tier gold system would be endangered.

However, the American position was not spelled out at any great length before a public forum until today.

The two-tier system was set up in March following wild speculative purchases of gold. It established an official monetary market where gold would change hands between governments at $35 an ounce and a free market for private dealings.

Moffats Expands

Moffats Ltd. has announced a major expansion program for the next 12 months, costing in excess of $2 million.

Expansion includes the construction of a new 150,000 square foot range manufacturing plant located in Weston, Ont.

The new plant will enlarge the company's main facilities from 485,000 square feet to over 635,000 square feet.

Construction of the new plant will commence in October for completion in June 1969. Assembly lines are expected to operate by August 1969.

Woodward's Up

British Columbia-based Woodward Stores Ltd. said Monday its consolidated net profit for six months ended July 31 was $1.98 million up 13.5 per cent from $1.74 million for the same period last year.

Sales, including service charges were $110.6 million, an increase of 9 per cent over $101.6 million for the first half of 1967.

More than $1.8 million was spent on fixed assets in the half.

C. N. Woodward, chairman and chief executive officer, said most of the money went on an addition to the company's New Westminster store.

Farmer Low Bidder

Lowest of six bids on an addition and alterations to Royal Jubilee Hospital for a new analytical laboratory was by Farmer Construction Ltd., Victoria.

Announced Construction Association reports the bid was for $498,880, compared with a high bid of $74,000 from G. H. Wheaton Ltd., also Victoria.

Corporation Fanciere

The Montreal investment firm of Corporation Fanciere de Montreal was declared bankrupt today in Quebec Superior Court.

The petition for bankruptcy had been filed Sept 11 by the Royal Trust Co., trustee for an undetermined number of debenture holders of the corporation's securities, and was granted when it was not contested in court.

Lawyer Jean-Claude Pothier, representing Corporation Fanciere, told Judge J. B. O'Connor during the bankruptcy sitting that he would not contest the petition.

Gas Hearing Involves B.C.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States Federal Power Commission Monday set a date for starting arrangements for the court-ordered sale of the El Paso Natural Gas Co.'s Pacific Northwest division, including its Canadian natural gas supplies of 500 million cubic feet daily.

The commission scheduled a pre-hearing conference for Nov. 7.

El Paso, after a series of court cases that twice went to the U.S. Supreme Court, was ordered to get rid of the gas-distribution system it acquired in 1959 by merging with Pacific Northwest Pipeline Corp.

The litigation was based on U.S. anti-trust laws.

The power commission had given its approval to the merger.

The book value of the assets ordered divested—they stretch from Texas to the Canadian border in Washington State—was $223.23 million as of last Dec. 1, the commission says.

A new company called Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Colorado Springs, Colo., will buy the system by financial arrangements that include issuing preferred stock to El Paso.

El Paso's Canadian gas comes from the Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver.

NHA Rate to Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — This week's mortgage business strongly last month, NHA loan applications from the approved lenders in the first eight months of 1968 covered 34,421 dwelling units, up 49.5 per cent over the same period last year.

The NHA ceiling during July, August and September has been 8 1/2 per cent, down from a record 9 1/2 in the second quarter of the year. It will drop to 8 1/4 in the final quarter—and may go down to 8 1/8 if this week's long-term bond market is firm.

The ceiling is set each quarter on the basis of 2 1/2 percentage points higher than the average yield at market prices on seven long-term federal government bonds during the four weeks at the end of the previous quarter.

The long-term average for the past three weeks has been 6.48 per cent. In successive weeks it was 6.44, 6.47 and 6.53 per cent. If this week's average, to be reported Thursday by the Bank of Canada, rises to 6.56 on weaker prices, the resulting ceiling will be 8.75.

But if this week's bond prices are firm and the average yield does not rise to 6.56, the resulting NHA ceiling will be an eighth of one per cent still lower, 8 1/8 per cent.

Okun Advisors Win One

The Washington Post WASHINGTON — Chalk 'one' up for the council of economic advisers.

When General Motors announced Monday a retail price increase of $49 U.S. on its average 1969 price list, it was a considerable victory for the council and its chairman, Arthur M. Okun.

A week ago—just prior to the Chrysler announcement of an $84 increase—The Washington Post reported that the official view here was that rising costs didn't amount to more than $35 per car.

Considering rising productivity, and large profits, the government felt that the industry could easily absorb all or some of this cost. But that wasn't really expected.

On the other hand, officials were not ready to settle for the $100 that auto industry critic Ralph Nader had suggested the economic council would cheer.

Allowing for the usual dealer discount, GM stands to net about $37 out of the $49 price boost. Thus, while council officials modestly refused public comment, there were smiles on their faces.

Moreover, in contrast to Chrysler's 3 per cent increase on optional equipment, GM announced increases of less than 1 per cent when adding it all up—including Chrysler's higher price for head restraints—a typical car with optional equipment was boosted $123 by Chrysler and $72 by GM.

Like Chrysler, GM cut back the value of its car warranty. But the improved steering column and other claimed quality additions will probably offset the reduced warranty.

What everyone here now expects is that Ford will follow GM's pattern closely, and Chrysler—as it has had to do on other occasions—will roll back its prices to meet GM.

"Any price increase doesn't make us cheer," said one official, "But this was certainly a positive response in the right direction."

OSC LIMITS PROFIT

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Securities Commission moved Monday to reduce the amount of profit a broker-dealer can make on underwriting shares of a speculative mining company.

Acting on the recommendation of a committee which has studied for a year the financing of junior mines, the commission said it was cutting the allowable price spread on such share sales to 100 per cent from 200.

The spread is started by the price at which the dealer gets the shares from the company's treasury.

The committee, under OSC commissioner, D. S. Beatty, said the new maximum allowable price spread of 100 per cent should be reviewed constantly to see whether a further reduction is justified.

Its report was made public Monday.

Saanich Sewer Enterprise QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Q. Was the decision to call for a vote on the consolidation of the Saanich Sewer System made hastily?

A. NO. Discussions on the possibility of creating a single Sewer Enterprise started in August, 1966, and have continued on a regular basis since that date. The Municipal Council of that day decided that a single Sewer Area was essential if Saanich was to grow and progress along orderly lines. In 1967, almost a year after the first discussions were held, the Department of Municipal Affairs granted enabling legislation to permit the submission of a By-law combining all Sewer Areas. Council debated the problem and felt that by simply making the one Enterprise Law, a hardship would be worked on many citizens who have been paying for sewers for many years. As a result, Council decided that some form of abatement must be offered to offset the costs of the many years of payment. Legislation to allow an abatement to be made was passed in the Provincial Legislature this spring. With that decision behind them, council agreed to a formula which will see home-owners now in sewer areas receiving an annual abatement of $8.70 thus reducing their yearly payments from the standard $22.14 to $13.44. The decision to hold a vote on September 28 was not made hastily, but only after long and detailed debate which resulted in a unanimous council decision to go to the people.

PLEBISCITE APPROVED FOR REGIONAL COLLEGE

Education Minister Donald Brotherton announced Monday the provincial cabinet had passed an order-in-council permitting a number of lower mainland schoolboards to present a joint plebiscite to ratepayers for a new regional college.

The school boards include Langley, Surrey, Delta, Richmond, New Westminster, Burnaby, Maple Ridge and Coquitlam.

Mr. Brotherton said the districts have a combined Grade 12 enrollment of 5,700 students. If the boards were successful with the referendum and facilities were provided, the projected college could have an enrollment of 1,500 by September of 1969.

"It could be the largest community college in the province if the people of the area approve of this procedure," he said.

Mr. Brotherton added that a delegation from the school boards involved had sought approval of his predecessor, the now Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, for two separate colleges. Mr. Peterson had suggested they join forces behind one such institution.

Separation Law Used in Divorce

Canada's new divorce laws were invoked again Monday when a Victoria couple was granted a divorce on grounds they had not lived together since 1959.

The new law says a married couple can be divorced if they have been separated for more than three years.

They produced evidence in court that they had tried to reconcile their marriage many times, but had failed. Their last attempt at living together was in June, 1959.

Another Victoria couple, seeking divorce because of separation, said they had tried to live together until June, 1967, when the husband had relations with another woman.

FORGAVE HUSBAND

Later, the wife said, she forgave her husband his unfaithfulness and they resumed living together in August the same year.

"Two weeks later, he was back with the other woman," the wife testified.

Under cross-examination by counsel, she said she did not want to be reconciled with her husband.

"I want a divorce," she said—and got it.

Victoria lawyers say a number of women here are entitled to divorce because they are deserted by their husbands, but they must produce proof.

DIVORCE COSTLY

"This is often costly," says Mrs. Patricia Hilborne, president of Victoria's Low-Income Group.

"Many people in this city will have to stay married because they can't afford the $500 or more required to dissolve their marriage."

Mrs. Hilborne said many Victoria women, deserted by husbands who pay nothing to help care for themselves or their children, are living on welfare.

"These husbands just disappear," Mrs. Hilborne said, "and if the woman wants a divorce she has to pay for it."

WELFARE POOL

"I would like to see the lawyers form a welfare pool to help deserted women who would like to make a fresh start."

Divorce actions to be heard in Victoria Divorce Court during the coming month are based on grounds of separation for more than three years, cruelty—mental or physical—and adultery.

Adultery was the only grounds under the old Canadian divorce law and many lawyers say it is the most easy to obtain.

Tiny Tim Men Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two members of entertainer Tiny Tim's troupe arrested Sunday at Vancouver International Airport are scheduled to appear in court Nov. 22 charged with possession of marijuana.

Philip Deblasio, 36, of Rhode Island, described by police as manager of the U.S. entertainer, was taken into custody after customs officers found one quarter of an ounce of marijuana in luggage.

Ronald Wayne Krietzman, 25, of Los Angeles, described as an assistant manager, was arrested after customs men found two ounces of marijuana in other luggage.

Both were released on bail of $500.

Before the Magistrate

A man with a criminal record of close to thirty convictions since 1929 pleaded guilty to four counts of theft in central criminal court Monday.

Roy Lindley, 62, of no fixed address was sentenced to two years less a day in Okalla prison. Magistrate William Ostler said he would make a strong recommendation to the prison director that Lindley be sent to Alouette River Institute (a treatment centre for alcoholics).

Court was told that between Thursday and Sunday he took $315.13 worth of articles from area stores. The goods included a watch, clock toaster and transistor radios.

Prosecutor Cory Stoltz said Lindley had been released from prison Friday and had "one of the longest criminal records I've ever seen."

Court was told Thomas Boyle, 1429 Vining took $15 from the till of a gas station Sunday but was caught by an attendant while closing the cash register. He told the police he needed the money to pay his rent.

A pre-sentence report is being prepared.

RED CARPET WELCOME FOR QUEBEC PREMIER

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle will receive Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson with the full red carpet treatment, usually reserved only for visiting heads of state, when he pays a week-long official visit to France Oct. 11-16, officials here said today.

The French president will give a banquet in honor of his Quebec guest at the Trianon Palace in Versailles during his stay. Johnson will invite de Gaulle to a return dinner, possibly at Quebec House here.

Officials are working on protocol details pending an official announcement of the visit, expected to be made in the next 49 hours.

De Gaulle and Johnson also are expected to have a series of talks, mainly on broadening economic and financial relations between France and Quebec.

Bennett Laughs Off Ottawa Claim

Premier Bennett Monday laughed off a federal cabinet minister's claim that Ottawa must take over control of the Roberts Bank superport rail connections from the province.

"Just tell him I laughed and laughed," Mr. Bennett said when asked for his reaction.

He was commenting on Public Works Minister Arthur Laing's claim that the premier wanted to share in the lucrative rail-hauling incomes by insisting that B.C. Hydro build the spur line to serve the proposed superport.

Mr. Laing said the federal government should assume jurisdiction for the rail connection just as it had for building the docks.

ALBERTA SET FOR MEDICARE

CALGARY (CP) — Health Minister J. Donovan Ross said Monday "it is only a matter of time" before Alberta will enter the federal medical care scheme.

Speaking to a Social Credit meeting, the minister said he could not predict the exact date.

SAANICH MAY BUY KEY LOT FOR CENTRE

A key lot in the Shelbourne apartment plan area was recommended for purchase by Saanich lands and planning committee Monday night.

The land, on the west side of Shelbourne opposite Midgard, will be bought for $8,100 if council approves the recommendation.

Adjoining lots are to be replotted and formed into apartment sites and Bowker Creek will be rerouted.

Acquisition of the lot is a step towards implementation of the 1967 Shelbourne centre plan which calls for apartments in this area.

Hotel Fire Claims Three

SOREL, Que. (CP) — Firemen recovered two bodies and sought a third following a blaze Monday in the Old Verdon Hotel in this St. Lawrence community about 50 miles east of Montreal.

Police identified the two victims whose bodies were found as Jean-Guy Girard, about 35, and Jean-Philippe Laporte, 55, who lived for many years in the hotel.

Veteran of Two Wars Died Sunday at 80

Funeral services will be held Wednesday for William Hanson, 80, 747 Falkland, a veteran of two world wars, who died Sunday in Veterans' Hospital.

A man of many careers the world over, Mr. Hanson had been a visitor to, or resident of Victoria for 25 years. For the past 21 years he had been a member of the Esquimalt Legion.

His first contact with the province was early in the century, when Mr. Hanson arrived to teach school in the Gulf Islands and at Revelstoke high school. He had received classical education in England.

TWICE WOUNDED

When the First World War broke out, he returned to Britain to enlist and served in France, where he was twice wounded.

After the war he went to Malaya for U.S. Rubber and eventually operated a huge rubber plantation. When the Depression struck, he headed for New York to set up a landscape gardening business and to lecture in the field.

At the outbreak of the Second World War, Mr. Hanson came to Canada to enlist.

He concluded his career as a travelling auditor for the department of national defence, retiring to Victoria in 1958. He was predeceased by his wife, Peggy, some years ago.

Funeral services will be held in Sands Mortuary at 11 a.m. Wednesday with Legion members participating.

Convict Ends Roof Protest

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — A prisoner climbed down from the boiler house roof at Western State Penitentiary Monday, ending a two-day demonstration against prison conditions.

Warden James F. Maroney said James Holland, 27, scaled a 10-foot wall surrounding the exercise area to reach the boiler house Saturday.

The prisoner shouted to reporters on the street beside the prison that he was protesting maximum security policies at the prison.

He said there are "31 black men in security" and demanded the replacement of Maroney. Holland is a Negro.

Introducing cars that can think.

The 1969 Volkswagen
1600 series.
The only cars in the world
with computerized fuel injection
as standard equipment.

The 1969 Volkswagen Fastback is more than just a pretty face and a beautiful body, it's a car with brains.

Because every Fastback now comes with a real live honest-to-goodness computer. It's in there for the same reason computers are in a lot of things nowadays. To make life easier for somebody. (In this case, you.)

What the computer does is mastermind our new fuel injection system. It has tiny sensors attached to the engine that feed back information on engine speed, temperature and load. The computer then decides in a millionth of a second, precisely (you know how computers are) how much fuel to squirt into the cylinders.

Result: You don't waste gas.

Old fashioned carburetor problems like flooding, icing and stalling are gone forever. Because the old fashioned carburetor is gone forever.

And because the computer is a sealed, transistorized unit, it can't break down. So no matter how hard you drive the Fastback, you'll never drive it out of its mind.

A fuel injection system like this one comes as a three to four hundred dollar optional extra on a few big cars with unthinkable price tags. On the 1969 Volkswagen Fastback, Squareback and Notchback sedans, it's standard equipment.

(In fact, about the only optional extra is our fully automatic transmission, which is also new this year.)

Volkswagen has always been the thinking man's car. Now you just have to decide if you're the thinking car's man.

NINE WORLD RECORD-HOLDERS ...

... TICKETED TO SHOW IN CITY MEET

For Victoria, a Glimpse of the Games

... in 200 metres

You may not have to go to Mexico City to see the world's best male sprinters in action. In fact, finals in the men's sprints in next month's Olympic Games could be almost a repeat of dash events at Centennial Stadium Saturday afternoon.

This became a distinct possibility Monday when U.S. Olympic coach Payton Jordan confirmed that 15 members of his squad, including nine world record holders, would appear in an "Olympic Preview" track and field meet.

When the Victoria International Track and Field Society was successful in a bid to present our Olympic track and field squad in its only Canadian appearance as a team, it was first thought the program would merely provide the Olympians with a brisk workout before departing for Mexico City the following day.

Then the organizers set to work in an attempt to acquire some world class talent to give the Canadians the kind of opposition that could improve their Olympic chances, sending Ron Bowker to the U.S. Olympic trials and keeping telephone lines busy.

They came up with some great athletes and a fine meet was assured.

It became Canada's track spectacle of the year Monday when Jordan told Art Burgess of the organizing committee by telephone:

"You have the cream of our track crop."

Before the Americans decided to send their Olympic aces to Victoria, Bowker was elated with the field he had lined up for sprint events.

He believed he had three of the five men in the world given a chance to take medals away from Americans in the Mexico City dashes in Jamaica's Lennox Miller and Canada's Harry Jerome, both co-holders of the official world 100-metre record, and Trinidad ace Edwin Roberts, bronze medalist in the Tokyo Olympics.

Also in the sprint field were Ronald Moneque, another Trinidad Olympian, and Wes

Clayton of Jamaica, one of the world's top long jumpers who is also a whiz in sprints.

Today, Bowker is in ecstasy over possibilities in the 100 and 200-metre events since the list submitted by Jordan includes John Carlos, who was under the world mark with a timing of 19.9 in the recent U.S. Olympic trials, and record-matching Charlie Greene and Jim Hines.

Also on the U.S. squad are the 1,600-metre relay team of Vince Mathews, Ron Freeman, Larry James and Lee Evans; the 400-metre relay squad of Greene, Hines, Ronnie Ray Smith and Mel Pender; Larry Questad, 100-metre; world record discus holder Jay Sylvester; long jumper Charlie Mays; high jumper Ed Carruthers and Wade Bell, 800 metres.

Seattle Approves Stadium Overhaul

SEATTLE (AP)—City council approved a $1,170,000 contract Monday for remodeling and rental of Sicks Stadium, clearing the way for American League baseball here next season.

The stadium will be used for major league ball until a new $40,000,000 domed multi-purpose stadium, already approved by voters, is built here.

Next games: Wednesday—Belmont at Esquimalt, Mt. Douglas at Victoria High and Oak Bay at Mount View.

TUNA, ANGLER TUSSLED FOR ALMOST 18 HOURS

NORTH LAKE, P.E.I. (CP)—A 930-pound tuna was brought to gaff Sunday three days after a bluefin of identical weight was landed here. They are thought to be the biggest landed anywhere in the world this year.

William Oulton of Charlottetown boated the fish after a 17-hour and 40-minute overnight battle that left the fishermen and crew exhausted.

Several times during the night Oulton's line became entangled in nets and buoys of commercial fishermen but the crew managed to clear it.

Robert Crowell of Saint John, N.B., Thursday caught a 930-pounder after a one-hour and 50-minute battle.

FIVE-FOOT-FIVE Tom Cuff, of Victoria's Canadian Press Bureau, gets his facts straight from tall players expected to line up with reorganizing senior women's basketball team. Outstanding performer in provincial high school finals last spring, six-foot-two Ariene Allwin (centre) is new arrival on city hoop scene and is introduced by Mary Coutts, defending scoring champion in Inter-City League. See story below. (Photo by Bill Halkett.)

Reorganization Keeps Women in Hoop Loop

A new senior "A" women's basketball team is being formed in Victoria out of the ashes of last season's Canadian champion Victoria Rawlins.

The new entry in the Inter-City Women's League will contain many new elements along with the basic framework of last year's squad.

Fresh faces show up but still required is a sponsor, new name and a coach.

Ariene Allwin of Merritt, the 6'2" outstanding player in last season's high school tournamet at Salmon Arm, and Diana Brozok from McBride, a member of the B.C. girls' all-star team, are among the newcomers.

Three members of New Zealand's national team, now residing in Victoria, also are expected to turn out.

Coaching duties will be assumed by a newcomer, now that Howie Tooby, last season's guiding light, has taken a coaching job at the University of Victoria.

Mary Coutts, the perennial scoring leader of the Inter-

City League, heads the list of holdovers.

The team is expected to commence workouts within two weeks.

Support Lacking In Detroit

DETROIT (AP)—Officials of Detroit Cougars of the North American Soccer League announced Monday their decision to disband because of financial losses.

"We had been prepared to incur substantial losses for at least a five-year period, but the actual losses have been so far in excess of our most pessimistic projections, with no real indication of significant improvement, that we simply could not feel justified in carrying on," said John W. Anderson II, president of the Cougars.

"We had hoped for a minimum average paid attendance of 5,000 to 6,000 per game," Anderson explained. "The actual average was less than 1,500."

He said he and other Cougars officials remain convinced that soccer as a professional sport will eventually catch on in North America.

Wright, Mitchell Top Drag Class

Clayton Wright of Cowichan and Mill Bay mechanic Ray Mitchell reign as the top personalities among Vancouver Island's drag-racing fraternity.

Wright's victory in Sunday's stock helped the Firebird driver to claim the Courtney Trophy as the season's overall point champion.

Mitchell was named the top mechanic and also was awarded the coveted Doug Helene Memorial Trophy as the top sportsman.

Winners in Sunday's races also included Al Clark and Vancouver's George Davis.

Mighty McLain A Mere Mortal To Oriole Team

By The Associated Press

Denny McLain might be the first 31-game winner since 1931, but to Baltimore Orioles, he's just another losing pitcher.

The 24-year-old right-hander is 29-3 against the other eight teams in the American League, but against Baltimore he is 2-3. The Orioles edged him 2-1 Monday night, making them the only club with an edge on McLain.

The loss also left McLain with just one more chance to win No. 32 and become the winningest pitcher in the major leagues since Grover Alexander in 1916. He is scheduled to pitch five innings Saturday as a tuneup for next Wednesday's World Series opener against St. Louis Cardinals.

In other games on an abbreviated schedule starting the last week of the season, Washington Senators tripped Boston Red Sox 6-5 in 14 innings, Minnesota Twins and Dean Chance blanked California Angels 3-0 and Oakland Athletics defeated Chicago White Sox 5-1 in the American League. Cincinnati Reds overcame Pittsburgh Pirates 9-6 before losing 2-1 in 10 innings in the only National League games.

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Bill Wakeham, the Gorge Vale belter who met a week's expenses by pocketing the first-place purse in the Glen Meadows Open at the weekend, and Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer will be gunning for professional tour tickets next week.

Vollmer and Wakeham will leave next weekend for a tournament player training school in Florida.

About 80 pros will be striving for the limited and precious playing cards that will allow them to tread along the Gold Trail as tour regulars.

Also attending the school will be four Seattle-area golfers who, through participation in Pacific Northwest events, are well known in Victoria. They are fledgling professionals Mike Evans, Bill Tindall, Mike Reesor and Tom Storey.

Only two Canadian golfers—Moe Norman ($10,366) and Alvie Thompson ($6,999)—won more money than Vollmer or Wakeham on the recent all-Canadian tour, and one would suspect one or both of the B.C. boys may turn up with that coveted PGA card.

Vollmer tried last year. He failed miserably and was a down-hearted individual when he returned to Vancouver. He started slowly on the Canadian tour but then recovered his cool and confidence and finished third ($6,831) on the earnings parade. Wakeham was fourth with $5,630 in official earnings.

Locally, the big play Sunday was on the club championship level. With the fall of Ricky Kent at Colwood, only one of five area clubs has a chance of naming a successful defender.

Last year's club champs at Gorge Vale, Victoria and Uplands are out of the picture. Cedar Hill's Ray Harrington is the only defender still on the march.

Harrington, bidding for a third straight title, appears to be in a hurry to get home first and fastest. He defeated Greg Tregear on Monday to step into the semi-finals. Other contenders—Greg Candler, Ron Griffiths, Gerry Smith, Bob Herberston, Greg Barnes and Brian Gandy—won't play their quarter-final bouts until the weekend.

At MacLeod, Gord Jones, Jim McColl and Cec Ferguson reached the semis at Gorge. Jones did it the hard way, defeating Vince Clarkson on the 22nd hole with a birdie. Clarkson missed a 40-inch putt on the 18th hole that might have settled it all there and then.

At Oak Bay, the big news was the fall of Dr. George Bigelow. Bill Thompson upset the former Canadian seniors' champion and joined Bruce McFarlane, Brian Carbery and Doug Munro in the semi-finals.

At Uplands, Gord Fellow, Dave McCall, Claude Heggie and Roger Bishop filled the fours.

Several times champion Laurie Kerr was the one who sidelined Kent, on the 18th, at Colwood. Colwood's other first-round winners were Blair Wilson, Vic Painter, Ron Howard Sr., Dave Hogarth, Max Buckley, Joe Evans and Ted Colgate.

BRIEFLY: Norm Neely and George Robertson, a pair of Uplands playing-pals, figured in one of the longest club playoffs on record. Meeting in a flight quarter-final, they finished the regulation 18 holes all square. They halved a pair of playoff holes, and decided to settle it during their regular Saturday outing. That, too, ended all square, and they marched off two more playoff holes. After 40 holes, they still remained deadlocked. They finally used a coin to decide the match.

Neely won the flip.

Tapping Oak Bay's hole-in-one fund at the weekend was Dr. Bonar Buffam. He scored his ace on the 13th. Old friend Graham McCall, who usually confines his golf tributes to the playing prowess of his son, Dave, forgot himself at Qualicum Beach recently and came up with a hole-in-one. The autumn manoeuvres around the pro shops has been fierce. Colwood's Bill Court has taken on Glen Davies and Bob Hogarth as his assistants. They'll replace Earl Davies, who has joined Dick Munn at Point Grey in Vancouver, and John Morgan. The latter will replace Jay Wilson at Oak Bay. Wilson is leaving for Grenada in the Bahamas to join former Victorian Jimmy Squires in the yacht chartering service.

Golf Body Adopts Hard-Line Stand

NEW YORK (AP) — Max Elbin, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, called for an end of concessions to the touring pros Monday and said they would be given no voice in future tournament management.

Elbin released a three-page mimeographed statement, outlining the policy of the PGA. The PGA president said it had been a mistake in 1946 to accede to the players' requests for more authority in managing the tour.

"We intend to give the players more adequate representation in tournament policy," he said "but none whatsoever in tournament management."

Elbin's statement said he felt it his duty to protect all parties with an interest in the tour no matter how few of today's touring pros give the PGA their support.

"Some of those who have precipitated the difficulties may be surprised to find out how little time will be required to develop a new crop of capable players," his statement concluded.

The officials of the PGA and a new organization of touring pros have been feuding over control of the lucrative tournament tour.

The Canadians have not yet been selected.

The winner of the three-team playoffs then goes to Mexico City in 1970 for the final phase of the World Cup.

BILL RIGNEY

Boot Boss Joins Angels As Manager

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angels gave manager Bill Rigney a new two-year contract Monday and hired Dick Walsh, commissioner of the North American Soccer League, as general manager on a long-term pact.

Rigney, 50, has managed the Angels since their inception in 1961 and said he was happy to continue with the American League club.

Salary terms were not disclosed although informed sources had said earlier Rigney would receive $50,000 a year.

Walsh, 45, was a vice-president with Los Angeles Dodgers from 1960 through 1966 when he was elected commissioner of the United Soccer Association.

When the two soccer leagues in North America merged this year, he became president and later commissioner of the North American league.

Walsh succeeds Fred Haney, who announced last month he was stepping down as general manager but would remain with the Angels as adviser.

There had been reports Rigney would leave the Angels to go with either the Kansas City expansion club in the American League or return to San Francisco. He managed the Giants of the National League from 1956-57 in New York and in San Francisco from 1958 until he was fired on June 18, 1960.

Walsh and Rigney said the No. 1 objective of the club for next year would be to develop more bat power.

Hunt and Jago Triple Winners

Roy Jago and Herb Hunt came close often enough to pack off most of the silverware in the annual Greater Victoria horse shoe pitching championships.

Jago won the "A" singles, the ringer title (with 33 out of a possible 50) and also shared the "A" doubles with Hunt. Hunt won the "B" singles and completed his triple by teaming up with Gord Butts in the "B" doubles.

George Holland (singles), Jerry Cove and Ivan Brown (doubles) topped the "C" events.

Lunsford Seeks 'Interference' Penalty for TV

WINNIPEG (CP) — There is not much he can do about the weather, but general manager Earl Lunsford, of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, says rain wasn't the only reason for the small crowd at Sunday's Western Football Conference game here.

There was the matter of a National League game on CBC television between Minnesota Vikings and Green Bay Packers. The Vikings have particular attraction in Winnipeg because they are coached by Bud Grant, formerly of the Bombers, and the quarterback is B.C. Lions' graduate Joe Kapp.

"I want an explanation for this," said Lunsford angrily.

"We're in last place and we have bad weather to contend with, which is bad enough, then we have to fight with the NFL for support. And this is supposed to be a Canadian network supported by Canadian taxpayers."

IT HURTS

Rain, threatening all morning, started at game time and came down in torrents for most of the first half. Only 11,500 sat through it to watch the Bombers defeat Edmonton Eskimos 25-13.

Even at that, the crowd was a shade larger than the attendance of Aug. 18 when Calgary Stampeders were the visitors.

That game, without the counter-attraction of NFL television, was rained on heavily as well.

The only home attendance of sell-out proportions was 21,500 Sept. 8, a sunny afternoon when the Bombers looked inept in losing 21-15 to Montreal Alouettes.

"On a day when the weather is poor, a game like the Viking-Green Bay affair ruins us," said Lunsford.

"I'm going to kick up a storm at the next CFL meeting and do something about the CBC piping in NFL games on the afternoon of our games."

India Cinches Eastern Zone

TOKYO (AP) — India defeated Japan Sunday in the finals of the Eastern Zone's Davis Cup tennis competition.

India now will play West Germany at Munich for the right to meet the United States in the final of the international playdowns.

HOME GARDEN

Potting Hippeastrums

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hundreds of hippeastrum bulbs are being grown in Victoria homes, and most of them masquerade under the name amaryllis.

This is unfortunately a trade name for these bulbs, confusing the home gardener who can also grow the true amaryllis as a hardy outdoor bulb here on the coast.

Amaryllis belladonna is now blooming in our gardens, at the same period when we think of starting the potted hippeastrums into growth.

It will interest owners of these lovely plants to know the origin of the name hippeastrum. It is derived from hippeus, Greek for knight, and astrum, a star. The combined word indicates something splendid and shining.

Flowering size bulbs of hippeastrum are large, often four inches in diameter and because of their size are a vast storehouse of food.

This is the reason bulbs will usually put up a flower spike as soon as purchased, but frequently do not bloom the following year.

The time between making a new root system and the dying back of the leaves is too short to build flowers into the bulb as well.

Because of this need for an early root system, it is not advisable to repot each fall when starting up. Once in three years is enough.

In most years, scrape off a little top soil and redress with rotted leafmould and about a teaspoon of powdered balanced fertilizer to a six-inch pot.

With a one-inch space at the top of the pot, one filling each week will be enough water until growth is active.

Keep the pot in a warm, light room, turning it twice daily as the flower spike grows.

Leaves may come either with or after this spike starts growing.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Kim Gordon Poole, age 10, of Ottawa, Ont., for his question:

What kind of animal is the javelina?

In the Spanish language of the Old World, the sow of the wild boar was known as a "javelina." The Conquistadores who explored the New World discovered herds of animals that appeared to be first cousins of the wild boars they had known at home. It seemed natural to call the females javalinas. The Spanish also adopted the American Indian word for this native animal and changed it to "pecari." English-speaking settlers arrived and later found that the same animal already had two names. Most of them chose "pecari" but changed it to "peccary." In Texas, where the Spanish influence was very strong, the name "javalina" was adopted and then changed over the years to the javelina in today's question.

Scientists later had a closer look at the peccary, alias the javelina. They agreed that indeed he is a first cousin of the assorted pigs and wild boars of the Old World. But, strictly speaking, he cannot be classified as one of them. Pigs and peccaries are enough alike to be classified in the even-toed Artiodactyla Order, along with the even-toed camels and cattle, deer and antelope. But the true pigs are classified in their own family, Suidae. Because of slight biological differences, the peccaries merit their own family, Tayassuidae.

Fond of Roots

The native New World resembles a smallish wild pig and he roams the wilds with herds of his friends and relatives. He loves to root in the ground in true pig-like style and he eats almost any food he finds, meat or vegetable. He is especially fond of roots, grain and berries. But the peccary has a strong and unusual odor all his own. It comes from an oily musk gland on his back, about eight inches above his tail. He also has one less hind toe than a true pig and he never grows the outlandish tusks of certain Old World wild boars. These biological differences explain why zoologists classify the two pig-like peccaries of the New World in a family of their own.

The smaller peccary roams in large herds through forested regions from Mexico south to Paraguay. The larger peccary ranges as far north as Texas. There he uses his old Spanish name of javelina. The javelina, alias the colored peccary, alias the musk pig, is about three feet long, plus a small, stringy tail. He stands about two feet high at shoulder level and tips the scales at around 45 to 50 pounds. He roams among the cactus and scrub of the prairies with a herd of a dozen or so friends and relatives. As a rule, he prefers to avoid serious warfare. But when cornered, he defends himself with fierce courage.

The javelina's live-and-let-live philosophy does not apply to rattlesnakes. He cannot abide these snakes armed with venomous fangs. He faces a rattler with bristles high and jerks his head to coax the snake to attack. Then he bunches his four little trotters close together, leaps high in the air and pounces down again and again. His aim is deadly accurate and his sharp hooves soon slice the rattler to ribbons.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Peter Church, age 9, of South Murray, Utah, for his question:

Is it true that the North Star really moves?

The North Star has been hanging up there in the same spot for as long as you can remember. It has been right there for hundreds of years and scientists tell us that it will make no noticeable changes for hundreds of years to come. Nevertheless, these same experts insist that the North Star is moving—at a terrific speed. In fact, every star in the sky is whizzing at a terrific speed through the heavens. Of course we know that most stars rise and set. They seem to move over our sky because our globe is spinning around like a top. But these are not the real star paths. Their real paths are so immense that the stars seem to go slowly when actually they are dashing along at many thousands of miles an hour.

All the stars we see in the sky belong in a great system called the Galaxy. The great Galaxy is shaped somewhat like a wheel and like a wheel it spins around and around. All its 100 billion stars spin around with it and one of them is our North Star. In a few thousand years it will pull ahead of some of its neighboring stars and lag behind others. Then we shall see it from a different angle and it will not hang up there in the same spot all the time.

Sightings Of UFOs Explained?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)

A rash of unidentified flying object sightings in the south-western United States in 1966 and 1967 were the result of a government space project, the Columbus Dispatch reported Sunday in a copyrighted story.

The author of the article, Paul Massa, said he saw a discarded 15-foot-long spacecraft while on a tour of White Sands, N.M., missile range six months ago.

Massa said "government officials preferred to deny the validity of sightings" rather than explain what the UFOs were.

The best projects were launched from Walker Air Force Base in New Mexico and were called "space re-entry test vehicles."

Cone-shaped and resembling an inverted saucer, Massa quoted an air-force officer as saying, "it could conceivably give the illusion of being a flying saucer."

The New Mexico tests, called the Voyager Balloon Program, used balloons to lift the spacecraft to 130,000 feet, where the saucer's rockets ignited and propelled it upward to about 140,000 feet.

Massa said data from the flights was used to plan a landing on Mars.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Enterprising Burns Kept Rail Gangs Fed

By BOB BOWMAN

When armies advance one of the most difficult problems is logistics, that is keeping them supplied with ammunition, fuel, food and other necessities.

The CPR had an almost similar problem when it began building its railway across Canada in 1881. It had to keep thousands of workmen supplied with materials, fuel, food and pay as they moved forward across desolate country. The railway nearly went bankrupt getting around Lake Superior.

There was a lucky break when coal was discovered at Lethbridge (then called Coal Bank) and a branch line was completed to Dunsmore on the main route on September 24, 1885. This proved to be a valuable source of fuel as the final stage of the railway was built to Craigellachie in the Rockies.

In the meantime an enterprising young Irish-Canadian, Pat Burns, had solved the meat problem. Although brought up in Oshawa, Ont., Pat Burns' ambition was to "go west, young man," and he worked in the bush one winter to earn enough money to get to Winnipeg.

However, Burns accepted two oxen instead of money as his pay, and sold the meat. He actually earned more money this way, and learned a valuable lesson.

After establishing himself west of Winnipeg, Burns gradually got into the business of buying cattle (on time) from the farmers and selling the beef to construction gangs. He even shipped pork to workers on the Intercolonial Railway in the Maritimes. It was in this way that he helped the building of the railways across Canada, and the development of his now famous meat-packing empire.

Burns even got meat to prospectors in the Klondike gold rush, sometimes floating carcasses down rivers. The meat cost the miners one dollar per pound, which was very expensive in those days, although it would almost be a bargain now, even in Calgary.

Other events Sept. 24: 1669—Father Galinee and LaSalle met Joliat near present-day Hamilton, Ont. Joliat was returning from Lake Superior where he had been searching for copper.

1710—New England force led by Nicholson and Vetch began campaign to capture Port Royal, N.S.

1811—First Selkirk settlers arrived at Hudson Bay.

1859—Quebec became capital of Canada until 1865.

1897—An arch bridge opened over Niagara River. It was the third bridge over the river.

1910—W. W. Gibson flew his own plane at Victoria, B.C.

1950—First Canadian contingent for Korean war arrived at Tokyo.

1952—Six boxes of gold bullion were stolen at Toronto airport. They were never recovered but believed to have gone to Communist China via New York.

1959—External Affairs Minister Howard Green addressed United Nations on disarmament. (Copyright, 1968, Toronto Star Syndicate)

Arthur Mayse

Our first note is headed "Dog", and its subject is a smooth-haired fox terrier friendly and bright who answers to the name of Twiggy.

I can report that Twiggy, a black-and-white spayed female, likes to take people on walks. She eats one meal a day—evening—of dog meal garnished with selected table scraps, and the mistress who must give her up tells me that Twiggy is house-broken.

Last year, Twiggy's owner fell seriously ill. For a while it seemed unlikely that she would recover. Now she is convalescing, but painfully and very slowly, and even the care of a little year-old dog is beyond her.

She will be moving from her house to an apartment soon. Friends have suggested that her best course would be to have Twiggy "put to sleep," but this she will not do. Her dog, she points out, is young and healthy, with love to give elsewhere.

All this I learned when she phoned me one evening last week. She was half in tears, as who can blame her, but her message came through plainly enough.

She hopes that somewhere in Victoria, a middle-aged couple whose children are grown, and gone will give Twiggy a new home. (I'm sorry, kids. This one is not for you.)

If any such couple is interested, please call me.

"Be nice to own a string of rental boats, huh? Watch one party after another of fishermen shove off, mark down their times of departure, and when they return collect a fee for the use of each craft?"

No doubt that part of the operation is pleasant enough. But the marina business is not without its trials and tribulations, some of which are provided by Mr. Fixit who refuses to let well enough alone. The internal combustion engine is his specialty, and when it comes to outboard motors, he's convinced that he has forgotten more than the marine mechanics know.

Here's an up-Island operator. We may as well call him Pete. He has just sweated the last of his boats in at dusk. A couple of salmon gleam silver in the fish-box, and the fellows who caught them are unloading their gear.

They pay up and are about to shove off when Mr. Fixit turns to Pete the boatman.

"You know," he says, "that six-horse Chugit of yours was running a little rough when we started out, I figured she was set too lean, so I turned the low-speed control knob just a touch. Now she purrs like a kitten."

Pete thanks him with an inward grin, and off goes Mr. Fixit, well pleased with himself. What he doesn't know is that Pete, whose outboard carbs are tuned to a hair, keeps them that way by disconnecting their control knobs.

Mr. Fixit can twiddle 'em this way and that to his heart's content, and the motor will still purr like a kitten!

As every Victorian knows, our city is never visited by such fogs as Vancouver deservedly suffers. But our haze does sometimes thicken a mile, and on Monday morning, the University of Victoria campus was an eerie place.

Its buildings lurked dimly in a horizonless wasteland, nobody with a lick of sense drove the ring-road without at least his dimmers on, and occasionally visible in the mists were little, scurrying figures.

Many of these were freshmen of Uvic's 2,000, and for them the fog (Damn... I went and said it!) reflected a state of mind.

Most of the frosh didn't know quite where they were going, or what awaited them when they got there.

Well, one thing that does is Christmas exams, a collective horror that materializes at impossible speed. Study, young ladies and gentlemen, study, because the year-end flunkage is going to be something terrible.

B.C. Ferry Faces Long Hull

The highways department is planning to make one of our queens king-size.

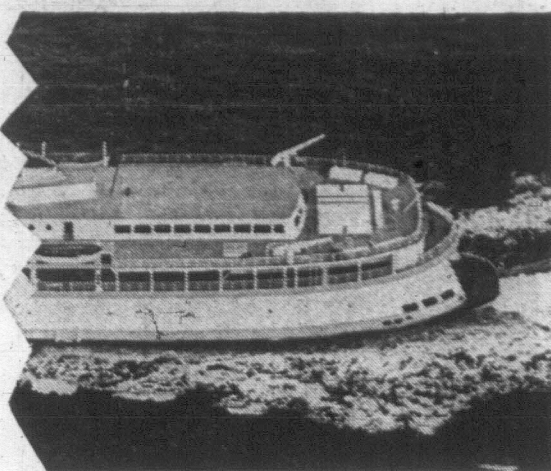

The experiment would extend one of the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferries to increase capacity by at least 50 cars.

Highways Minister Wesley Black Monday said an announcement will be made soon on the proposal which involves cutting a ferry in half and inserting an additional midships section.

Premier Bennett indicated about two years ago that the idea would be investigated and last spring ferry fleet manager Monty Aldous revealed that studies showed the capacity of the Queens could be increased by 50 to 200 cars depending on the length of the added centre section.

Mr. Black would give no details about the coming program except to add that it will include installation of holding tanks for toilet wastes so that they could be discharged into sewers at the terminals rather than dumped overseas as at present.

He was commenting on Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's statement that all ships, not just pleasure craft, eventually will be required to stop discharging toilet wastes into B.C. waters.

Boat Found; Fisherman Feared Lost

Police, Neighbors Joined in Search

Police and civilian boats are searching the waters south of Active Pass today for George Ernest Hughes, 52, of North Pender Island, missing since late Sunday.

Mr. Hughes' 12-foot outboard was found washed ashore on Razor Point late Monday, RCMP at Ganges said. He was reported missing earlier in the day.

He failed to return from fishing during a weekend fish derby in the area.

Mr. Hughes and his wife have been residents of the Island for about four years.

PENINSULA SCHOOL VOTE STEP CLOSER

The department of education has given initial approval to a $4,054,400 school building referendum for the Saanich Peninsula school district.

Cabinet approval is hoped for about the end of the month or early in October, school board secretary-treasurer Gordon Blair said today.

Voting by ratepayers could be about mid-October. Government grants will cover three-quarters of the building program. Ratepayers will be asked to approve long-term financing of the balance.

Mediation Member Leaves Post

John David Drew, executive secretary of the British Columbia Mediation Commission, has resigned after working two months for the three-man labor inquiry board, it was announced Monday.

Commission chairman John Parker said the resignation of 37-year-old Mr. Drew is effective immediately.

"He felt he had done what he could do in getting us organized and to give us a proper conception of the commission's structure," Mr. Parker said.

Mr. Drew said he left the $17,500-a-year post to resume his career with the federal government.

He said he plans to return to Ottawa Thursday to become planning co-ordinator for the department of manpower and immigration.

The commission has no plans to fill the vacancy, Mr. Parker said.

Multi-Use Plan For Old Estate

Community Centre, School and Park?

The Lambrick Estate in Gordon Head will be developed on a multi-use basis.

First indication of how this can be achieved was given to the Saanich lands and planning committee Monday night.

Still in the tentative stage and subject to many considerations, the schematic plan envisaged:

- School site on west side, 10.4 acres;
- Park in centre, 13.25 acres;
- Community Centre (2.84 acres) and multiple residential site (3.54 acres) to immediate north;
- Two further multiple residential areas, to south and east, one of 4.45 acres near Feltham Road and the other of 6.07 acres near Tyndall.

The scheme involves a trade with the school board, yet to be approved, under which Saanich would acquire a site set aside for a future school at McMorran and Tyndall.

In addition, Torquay Drive would be stopped and relocated slightly to the south, making a dividing line between the community centre and one apartment site and the school-park area.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said the relationship between the various uses offers "unlimited scope" for the use of joint facilities.

The Lambrick Estate, comprising 44.39 acres of undeveloped land, was purchased by Saanich in 1965 for $250,000 from the family of former Reeve A. G. Lambrick.

The property lies within a slightly broader area bounded by Torquay-Kennmore-Tyndall-Feltham.

Mr. Loney said Monday night it was "never our intention" that the Lambrick Estate be one big municipal park. Such a size wasn't needed.

(When the estate was purchased in September, 1965, a Saanich statement said:

"Undoubtedly consideration will be given to establishing a major district park on the site and, depending upon negotiations with school board officials, it is hoped that a part of it will also serve as the basis for a senior school site adjoining the park."

"Land within the estate not required for public use can be subdivided and sold for residential purposes. In this way, the municipality will be in a position to recover a portion of the purchase price."

Saanich also indicated at that time that a recreational facility will probably be located on the estate.

This was confirmed when ratepayers approved the $1.25 million recreation referendum last year which concluded $470,000 for a community centre and indoor swimming pool at the Lambrick Estate.

The lands and planning committee agreed to refer the plan to a meeting of the joint Saanich-school board planning committee next month.

B.C. Park Promoter Dies Here at Age 57

A man who did much to promote public interest in the need for provincial parks, died Monday.

Lt. Col. Seymour English Park, 57, 3820 Merriman Drive, passed away following a prolonged illness.

He was one of the original members of the parks division when it was formed in 1948 under the department of lands and forest.

An ardent camper himself, Mr. Park frequently travelled throughout the province to promote an interest in outdoor life and to awaken the public in developing and expanding the provincial park system.

He also directed several schools for family camping.

Born in Bangalore, British India, he was educated at St. Paul's, Dargueing. He also attended art school and studied journalism in London, England.

He served in the army during the Second World War.

Mr. Park was well known in militia circles.

UP FROM RANKS

He started as a private in the Seaforth Highlanders, Vancouver, and rose to become lieutenant colonel of the Canadian Scottish and senior staff officer for Vancouver Island. He retired from the militia in 1962, following 27 years of service.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday for Stanley Rickinson, a long-time Victoria resident who died while on a hunting trip north of Fort St. James. He was 62.

Born in Winnipeg in 1906, he came to Victoria some 60 years ago with his family. He attended Kingston St. School, Victoria West School and Victoria High School.

In his youth he was a soccer and lacrosse player in the area and in later years an ardent hunter and fisherman. He lived in View Royal.

Mr. Rickinson was also a close friend of George "Bebe" Mowat, cheerful tourist guide and Victoria publicist, who died Sunday in Ireland while on a world tour. The two often joked about who would survive the other.

Mr. Rickinson was a pioneer of the trail between Whitehorse and Dawson and spent about 15 years in the Yukon. He went there in 1925 as a messboy on riverboats and later drove caterpillar tractors on the week-long mail and supply trip between the two cities for seven winters.

MACHINIST

For the past 26 years Mr. Rickinson had worked as a foreman machinist at HMC Dockyard. He was a member of Mt. Newton Lodge No. 89 AF and AM, BCR.

His wife, Agnes, is survived by his wife Agnes; brother Ray, deputy minister of social welfare for the province; two daughters, Raynette and Colleen; a son, Tommy, of Victoria; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes. They will be followed by cremation.

Driver Licence Suspensions At Record High

Demerit System May Be Answer To Bad Driving

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Monday said driver licence suspensions by the motor vehicle branch have been skyrocketing.

He said 4,566 licences were suspended in the first eight months of this year compared with 3,471 for the corresponding period last year which had proved to be a record year for suspensions.

Mr. Peterson said small traffic court fines have not proved a deterrent to bad driving.

The new demerit system for a systematic procedure in licence suspension along with the experiment beginning in Greater Victoria Oct. 1 with "violation reports" by traffic police in place of court charges may help reduce the number of bad driving cases.

MAY TAKE COURSE

Mr. Peterson also said that in some cases, a motorist may be allowed to keep his licence if he takes and succeeds in a defensive driving course. Such courses now are available in night school.

There were close to 50,000 auto accidents in B.C. last year, up from 44,187 in 1966. And the first half of this year has produced 4,000 more accidents than over the comparable period last year.

"For the great mass of motorists, the few dollars they have to pay as a fine does not have any meaning," the attorney-general said.

"But everyone values the privilege of driving and the object of our program is to increase safety on our provincial highways through driver licence control."

GREATER RESPECT

"We believe this will lead to safer driving practices and greater respect on the part of motorists."

Brochures explaining the points system and the new driving law will be mailed out this week to all drivers in the province of Victoria.

Under the driver licence control program, a motorist is assigned points for various driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act. This ranges from two points for driving through a red light to 10 points for driving where the right to obtain a licence is suspended.

When a driver accumulates six points, he gets a warning letter from the superintendent. Point values will last from one to five years.

When a motorist accumulates nine points, he must show cause why his licence should not be suspended.

BANDED Cooper Hawk cocks a wary eye before being returned to freedom at Island View Wildlife Research Centre, Saanichton. A Cooper Hawk banded in 1961 by Dave Hancock, now operator of the centre, was recently found dead on the HMC Dockyard patio of John Wolfenden. The seven-year stretch eclipsed the record three-year life span of Cooper Hawks. Mr. Wolfenden sent the band number to the U.S. Wildlife Service who passed the information along to Island View. ## $2.45 a Pound Paid For Champion Steer

Gordon Michell has a golden touch with cattle.

His 1,140-pound Angus steer was first-named grand champion of the Pacific National 4-H Stock show. It then fetched a staggering $2,793, or $2.45 a pound, when bought at auction Saturday by Woodward Stores Ltd. The beef has great prestige value.

The current market price for top beef is 28 cents a pound.

It was the top price in tough bidding among nearly 1,000 people, some from business firms associated with food products.

Gordon is 17 years old and a veteran member of the Saanich Peninsula 4-H Beef Club. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Michell, 2598 Island View Rd.

Young local cattlemen have shone in recent 4-H competition. Gordon's fellow club member, Danny Speller of Braefoot Road, had the top 4-H steer at the Pacific National Exhibition.

BIG TRIPS

Gordon's talent with cattle has been recognized before. He spent a week in Lexington, Kentucky, this summer cattle judging as a representative of the B.C. Angus Association. Last year his 4-H activities won him a trip to Toronto.

Saturday's auction which included swine and sheep, produced sales totalling $54,589.38.

Underground Wiring Increasing Despite Costs to Ratepayers

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Underground utility wiring is increasing in Saanich despite high initial costs.

And municipal officials hope the trend gathers momentum. Planner Tom Loney said Monday night 67 lots were created with underground wiring last year and 167 so far this year.

Average cost per lot is $550 and the average cost-sharing is $150 from B.C. Hydro, $150 from the developer and $250 carried by local improvement.

In a report to the municipal lands and planning committee, he said there has been excellent co-operation with the developers and an increasing public interest in the aesthetics of putting overhead wires into the ground, eliminating poles.

The new municipal subdivision bylaw encouraged underground wiring and competition between developers did the same.

He added, however, that B.C. Hydro is reluctant to look at what is a higher initial capital cost. "They have not accepted that in the long run it is the cheaper thing to do," he said.

"We should press for this by every means at our disposal," said committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning.

"It is the thing of the future. It seems a waste of money to put it above ground."

At the Union of B.C. Municipalities annual conference in Vancouver last week, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis called on all municipalities to exert pressure on hydro and telephone utilities to put distribution underground.

B.C. lagged in this respect behind most areas of North America and Western Europe, he said.

Mayor Curtis was reporting results of an underground wiring feasibility study prepared by a private engineering consultant for the UBCM.

He also said B.C. Hydro has steadily resisted any move towards underground wiring on the grounds the cost is prohibitive.

In reply, Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, denied charges of delays and said there are "plenty" of distribution lines underground in B.C. cities.

Hydro was willing to negotiate underground wiring with any city that wants it.

Estimated costs of underground wiring are about three times higher than overhead. Frequency of maintenance may be less but cost of individual repairs are considerably higher.

"I see no particular economy," he said.

A B.C. Telephone Company spokesman said in residential subdivisions the cost of underground wiring is rarely more than three times higher than overhead wires.

Officials believe maintenance costs are about 15 per cent lower for underground wires. There are less frequent, but more expensive, repairs.

The telephone company spent $6.5 million this year on underground wiring.

PATIENT WALKING

A Victoria man who underwent an historic spinal operation Aug. 2 is now walking with assistance, a spokesman at Royal Jubilee Hospital said today.

The patient had a diseased spinal column replaced with a metal substitute in an operation which was a first for Canada and possibly the world. Hospital authorities have so far refused to release his name or that of his doctor.

1-in-3 Chance Scholarship Winner Here

One Rhodes Scholar will be chosen from the three universities in British Columbia this year.

Michael Brown, secretary of the scholarship trust in B.C., announced today applications for the scholarship—probably the best known international award—would close Oct. 25.

A selection committee will meet early in November to decide the provincial candidate. The award is for approximately $3,000 a year for two or three years of study at Oxford University in England.

Ask The Times

Q. What are the basic qualifications for joining the Victoria police force? How many recruits are taken on each year?—D.M.O.

A. A recruit on the city force must be a Canadian citizen or British subject. He must have Grade 12, although this may be either general or university entrance. Physically, the recruit must be between 5 feet 10½ inches and 6 feet 3 inches. He must have 20-30 vision without optical aids. He must pass a rigid physical examination and have two character references from his area. He must be able to drive a motor vehicle and have no criminal record. According to the Victoria department, certain minor infractions under the liquor or traffic acts are sometimes overlooked. Recruiting is only done when vacancies occur.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times. Addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor, Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve controversies or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Toddling Twins Double Handful

By PENNY SAVER

My own children are such a long way from infancy now that I had completely forgotten the trials of dealing with that age-group. I rediscovered them recently when I agreed to care for a neighbor's year-old twins. The parents had been called out-of-town briefly on urgent family business. Since they would be travelling most of the time and heistically busy the rest, they didn't want the children along and I soon learned why. Now that they are walking (albeit a bit unsteadily) the twins are a double handful. Even though they are too unsteady to do any concentrated climbing, Mark and Maggie can get into almost anything. Maggie has a passion for ashtrays—full ones, of course—while her brother seems determined to tumble down any stairs he can find. I almost went cross-eyed trying to keep track of them both.

Anticipating my troubles, Mark and Maggie's mother decided to give me a treat. She knows I am wild about shopping so she gave me some money and asked me to pick out a rough-around-home outfit for each. What fun! Children's clothing is so bright and attractive that it took me half an hour to make up my mind. I finally decided on a brother and sister set—just the thing for twins. These sets come in red or blue in infant sizes 12 to 24. The girl's outfit consists of a corduroy pant-jumper with snap-in seams and buttons on the shoulder for easy putting on and taking off. The neckline is round and trimmed with braid. A puffy sleeved blouse of white cotton with lace trim on the little collar goes with the set. The boy's jumper is exactly like the girl's except the neck is V-shaped and trimmed with braid. His white cotton shirt has short sleeves and a collar just like his Dad's. These attractive sets are $5 each.

Smock Set For Baby Beau Brummels

Smocks and jump-suits are clear favorites for children between the ages of one to three. These outfits give the youngster a maximum of comfort with a minimum of trouble for Mom. Most smock sets range in price from $4.99 to $7.99, I learned. Mainly in the 12 to 24 months sizes, they come with in-seam snaps or without. The top can be the blousey gathered kind or closer fitting and trimmer looking. Materials run the gamut from velvets through double-knits to old favorites such as sturdy corduroy. One three-piece outfit for a pint-size Beau Brummel I found particularly striking. The pants are of a double-knit fabric in a plain blue shade. The top is of blue and white double-knit with a crisp white-cotton shirt built right in. This gives a vest effect without the vest. The third piece to this $5.99 set is a jaunty beret in alternating wedges of plain and patterned double-knit fabric.

The new synthetics make it possible to have the fanciest of children's clothes as easy to care for as a tee-shirt and jeans. This is proved conclusively by a white fur-fabric coat I saw for elegant toddlers. This $14 coat comes in 12 to 24 month sizes. Cut on plain lines that make the most of the long pile, it features a cosy hood with drawstrings ending in furry pom-poms.

Children love the feel of fur-fabric and velvet. I saw many children's hats in both these materials in a wide range of styles. Most included ear-flaps to keep out the winter winds and they come in sizes to fit the tiniest toddler up to a kindergarten child. The ones I saw were $2.99 or $3.99.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where to shop for these fashions for toddlers.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

The multi-colored fur of the tortoise-shell cat has always been greatly admired, but this doesn't hold for the woman with tri-colored hair.

Lowman

The frosted look, or the streaking mania, can lead to some unbecoming results when enthusiastic women cannot leave well enough alone. Pleasure with early results may lead to increasing experiments with hair color, either by continuing the lightening process at home or finding beauticians who oblige the whims of the customer rather than insisting on good judgment. This usually means frosting no more often than every five or six months.

Some women may have tried the streaking process at home, because their budget did not allow for the services of an expert colorist. Those with particularly weak wills and strong curiosities may find themselves at summer's end with an unrecognizable frost, tampered with by a summer sun as well as human hands.

If you are a victim of the streaking syndrome, here are three possible ways to correct the problem:

1. Have your hair cut in a soft, short style and start all over again when it is once more in good condition. If you were fond of your longer hair, it can be replaced with a fall. If you want to try the frosted look again, do it with the guidance and care of an expert and follow all the rules.

2. Go to an expert colorist who may be able to eliminate the tri-colored affect by darkening the lighter areas and lightening the darker ones. Definite streaking in the hair is not currently considered fashionable. You should not be able to count the streaks. Frosting should appear natural looking, and the frost tones should blend with the highlights of the hair.

3. If you do not want to cut your hair and the budget does not permit a visit to a colorist, you can try to recondition your hair at home. Dry, brittle, over-bleached hair can be returned to lustrous, pliant condition by repeated treatments with one of the many types of conditioners.

To cover the multi-colored effect, try one of the "temporary" rinses which color your hair only until the next shampoo. You should try a variety of shades to discover which is the most becoming to your own complexion and which is most effective in masking the striped hair underneath. Once you have found a suitable color, you can switch to a "semi-permanent" rinse of a comparable tone which usually lasts through four to eight shampoos or for one or two months.

Each time your semi-permanent rinse begins to fade, you can check on the progress and tone of your own hair. Within six months to one year, depending on whether you want a short or long hair style, sufficient time will have elapsed for your hair to return to a healthy condition. Then you may elect to try the frosted look again.

DEAR ABBY...

Very Generous With Her Rube

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: First let me explain that I am 46 years old and my husband, Rube, is 52. I have a dear friend about my age who lost her husband four years ago, and she's had a bad case of nerves ever since. She told me that her doctor told her that all she needed was a man.

Now I hope you won't think I'm a terrible person, Abby, but when my friend kind of hinted around that she would like to borrow my Rube once in a while to quiet her nerves, I really didn't see anything so wrong with it.

To tell you the truth, I never was very affectionate and I always felt like Rube got cheated in that department somewhat.

No one would have to know. Do you think I'm crazy?

RUBE'S WIFE
DEAR WIFE: I don't know whether you're "crazy" or not, but I do think your generosity is unbelievable. Perhaps, you'd better consult Rube. You could be playing a dangerous game. If Rube is going to be "lent out" for therapeutic purposes, maybe he knows some other needy cases of "nerves" that need "quieting."

DEAR ABBY: Our 17-year-old daughter has been asked to go with a 35-year-old father and his children, aged eight and 11, to the county fair for several days. The wife is unable to go. My daughter would look after the children while the father attended to fair business. They would all four sleep nights in a camper in one small room.

I feel that this is not at all proper. My daughter and husband think I am completely wrong. I am not saying that the man is not nice or anything like that. I just feel for the sake of common decency my daughter shouldn't agree to such sleeping arrangements. I would appreciate your views.

HER MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: We have a beautiful home, financial security, good kids, and a good social life. "So, what's the problem?" you ask.

We also have a "Fatso" at the head of our house. How can we make him understand that women like their men strong and lean—not soft and fat?

My man doesn't do a lick of work around the house, and his job permits him to sit down most of the time. He goes to a gym occasionally, but comes home and eats everything in sight. I either hide the goodies or don't buy them, but he manages to keep his belly loaded.

His clothes wear out too fast. He looks 15 years older than he is, and I am not interested in his insurance money. Frankly, he is getting unbearable. Please print this, Abby, to help fat men realize that they are losing their lives before they die by being so weak, lazy, and hogish.

WEARING THIN

CONFIDENTIAL TO TERRY: Don't go for a "now or never" kind of proposal. Insist on time in which to think it over. If he isn't willing to wait, it's a good bet that the marriage should never take place. Or would you rather be a divorcee at age 20?

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

COOKING CAN BE FUN

Dish of Tuna Stroganoff Makes Inexpensive Meal

If you want to combine speed, flavor and economy when unexpected guests are descending or you are broke and have borrowed from the rent money Tuna Stroganoff will save the day. Fourthly, in the same effort, you can be patriotic by choosing tuna packed in Canada.

TUNA STROGANOFF (serves 8)
Two 6 1/2-oz. cans chunk light tuna; 1/4 cup oil or butter; 1/2 pound mushrooms, scrubbed and sliced (or 4 1/2-oz. can sliced); 1/2 cup chopped onion (or 1/4 cup bottled instant); 1 cup coarsely chopped green pepper; 1-16 teaspoon garlic salt (or garlic salt with parsley); one can undiluted tomato soup; 1 tablespoon Worcestershire or soy sauce; 1 cup dairy sour cream; 3 cups cooked rice (see below).

In a large frying pan heat the oil gently and add the sliced mushrooms (drained if canned are used), onion, green pepper and garlic salt and gently saute for 5 minutes.

Stir in soup and Worcestershire or soy sauce and bring just to boiling.

Add tuna and gently heat through while stirring. Finally add sour cream and heat but do not boil for mixture may curdle if boiled. Serve over mounds of the following:

Hot Cooked Rice: To 2 1/2 cups boiling water and 1 teaspoon salt add 1 cup raw long grain rice and bring to boil covered. Turn off heat. Let stand five minutes.

Turn heat on low as possible and cook 25 minutes longer or until all water is absorbed and rice is tender. Or use quick-cooking rice: bring to boil 1 1/2 cups water with 1 teaspoon salt; add 1 1/2 cups quick-cooking rice, stirring. Cover, remove from heat and let stand 5 minutes.

Note: This is an excellent dish to serve from your chafing dish at a buffet supper.

Cancer of the Cervix May Be the Result of a Virus

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A virus may play a role in causing cancer of the cervix, the lower part of the womb, one of the commonest forms of cancer in women.

The first evidence in this direction was reported in the journal Science Friday by four specialists at Baylor University in Houston, Tex.

Their evidence also suggests that the virus—a form of the common herpes or cold sore virus—may be transmitted by sexual contact.

This has not been proved. But the research, if it continues to lead in the same direction, seems certain to provide strong new evidence that viruses—disease-causing agents—are involved in at least some forms of cancer.

FOUR ASSOCIATES

The new work was reported by Drs. William E. Rawls, associate professor of virology; W. A. F. Tompkins and M. E. Figueroa, research fellows; and Joseph L. Melnick. Melnick is one of the world's leading virologists, noted for his work on polio virus in the days of raging polio epidemics.

The Baylor group began their research because of what Melnick—in an interview—called cancer of the cervix's "peculiar epidemiology."

By this, he meant that it is most common in women with uncircumcised male partners and women with multiple marriages or many sex partners—and lowest in Jewish women (whose husbands are usually circumcised) and nuns (who are practically never afflicted). This has long led to the suspicion that there is some association with sexual intercourse, particularly with uncircumcised men.

Two years ago the Texans began seeking viruses in the smegma (a genital secretion) of such men.

DEFINE TYPES

They found four different viruses, among them type 2 herpes virus. They had previously found that herpes simplex—cold sore virus—really consists of a type 1 (the kind that actually causes cold sores or fever blisters) and type 2 (most often found in the genital area).

They did not find, and did not expect to find, the virus itself in cancer-stricken women. If viruses cause human cancer, they do so, it is believed, by dictating a chemical change in the cells, then disappearing.

What the scientists looked for were antibodies—disease-fighting chemicals—produced by these women specifically in response to type 2 herpes virus.

They found them in 88 per cent of 25 women with cervical cancer. They could find them in few women without cervical cancer, including 58 matched closely in age and socio-economic status to the cancer group. Socio-economic status is an important variable, because cervical cancer is commonest in low socio-economic groups.

DEGREE OF ASSOCIATION

"All this does not tell us this cancer is caused by this virus," Melnick summed up. "It does tell us there is a high degree of association. It suggests very strongly that cervical cancer is an infectious disease and spreads like a venereal disease, by either this virus or some still unknown agent."

A next step will be to seek other chemical evidence, in effect footprints, of type 2 herpes virus in cancerous cervix tissue. This would be genetic material—nucleic acids—left by the virus to dictate production of cancer.

Lone Friendly Lion Plays in City Show

A circus played at the McPherson Playhouse Monday night. It was low on animals. Only one friendly lion was on stage. Its shaggy mane topped a way-out skirt of leather. Three teen-age high-wire artists opened their magnificently spangled capes when they appeared. Instead of the conventional sequined costumes, they revealed chiffon dresses ruffled to the extreme.

Woodward's chose a circus theme to introduce the store's new line of fall and winter clothes. And, if Monday's show was short on animals, it lacked nothing when it came to presenting clothes for the coming season. In a fast-moving performance, commented by Joan Fraser, 90 outfits made the "ring."

In keeping with the theme "Fashion Carousel," the stage was dominated by a glittering carousel and had rising futuristic panels to complete the decor. The stage designs and decorations were the work of William L. Patterson. Mrs. Rita Edwards was in charge of program illustration and properties.

If live animals were lacking, there was no dearth of the fur trim which they provide. Raccoons, in particular, were much to the fore, trimming outfits and moulded into chapeaux that leaned heavily on the bonnet and tam shapes.

Typical of this season's trend to lavish fur trim was a gold tulle coat that had deep bands of raccoon fur skimming its cuffs, collar and bottom hemline.

PRECEDED BY OTHERS

Several fashion shows have already been presented in town this month. Monday's show, like those before it, laid great emphasis on the use of leather. Hats, mini-skirts, mini-dresses and suits were shown in the mode material. Like previous shows, Monday's performance also accentuated the wearing of boots. In every tone, they ranged anywhere from just below the knee to thigh-length.

There were fashion forecasts at Monday's show that had not been emphasized previously. The main message was in the use of hose. Here, the keynote was color. Silver was used to excess in outfits teamed with silver shoes (BIG NEWS this season, says Joan Fraser) and black lace chameaux gave a dash to many a cocktail dress.

But although, according to the commentator, colors will tend to be understated this season, the switch of color went from outfits to stockings. Some of the colors shown would draw attention at any party.

A typical example of the new look in hose was given when a model appeared in a mauve chiffon dress, her hair arranged by Raymond Salons with toning flowers as accent. Her stockings were... you guessed it... mauve.

There was something for every age at Monday's show. Carol Broadbent and Wendy Rodgers modelled outfits that would have the kindergarten set refusing to play in the sandbox for fear of spoiling their sandbox image.

Members of the store's Teen and Twenty Fashion

Council showed numbers that would have the younger set swinging. Taking part in this section of the presentation were Mard Barlow, Shirley Beecham, Jan Brown, Marg Coulter, Shirley Cree, Pamela Downer, Carmen DeGiralamo, Sue Edmonds, Marilyn Gillies, Irene Garmey, Gloria Gray, Linda Hughes, Marg Larsen, Janis Yuen, Lila Lee, Tracy Maclean, Judy MacGregor, Maureen Patterson, Dianne Plimley, Annette Readshaw, Gaile Repasse, Sherry Stapells, Cathy Sarsiat, Lora Beth Trail, Maureen Wills, Coleen Wills and Jacquie Hughes.

Modelling clothes for the average woman were Kip Wallis, Rosalie Essihias, Linda Dickie, Michaelle Green, Robin Pettit, Chris Philip, Verneice Bevis, Maude Parks and Lorraine Haslam.

The show was co-ordinated by Joan Fraser. Assisting her were Miss Nancy Ratcliffe, Miss Lora Beth Trail, Miss Gloria Gray and Miss Carmen DeGiralamo. In the absence of the customary circus band, Ken Peaker filled in as organist with Roy Silver to vocalise. Mrs. Nikl Dunn made-up the "performers."

Monday's show was presented under the sponsorship of the Kinetite Club of Victoria. Heading the group's committee were Mrs. Carol Rogers and Mrs. Joan McNeill.

The "circus" played to a full house and will give a repeat performance tonight, this time under the sponsorship of the Omicron Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi.

Beating out the new trend to the soft and fluffy is this hairstyle by Coiffeurs Createurs Canadiens, a group of Canadian stylists. The finely chiselled and firmly set look is "old hat" this season. The pictured style relies on an exaggerated curl around the eye for excitement. (CP Wirephoto.)

New Trend in Hairstyles

MONTREAL — (CP) — If hair spray sales drop this fall, blame the Greeks — and the Coiffeurs Createurs Canadiens, a group of Canadian hairstylists.

The group says its inspiration for current fall female hairstyles comes from delta, the fourth letter of the Greek alphabet which has the form of an equilateral triangle.

Ergo, milady will sport a soft and fluffy triangular hair style which frees the forehead come winter.

Gone is the finely chiselled, overly exact and firmly set look. Instead masses of soft curls cling gently to the temples and even swirl flirtatiously onto the face enhancing eyes or nose, or cheekbones.

Technical points for do-it-yourselfers include a graduated cut with tapered ends. Where there is no natural waviness a soft permanent wave is required. At the nape, hair is from one to one and one-half inches. Sides reach approximately one inch below the earlobe. Top of the head allows four to five inches.

Perhaps the most optimistic note sounded by the new creation is a drastic cutback on the use of hairspray. Crimping and back-combing are out too, making hair healthier and shinier in appearance.

Taxes Are Her Forte

MONTREAL (CP) — Not all managers of income tax departments are tall, skinny and grim as cartoon caricatures illustrate. At least, not the manager of the Royal Trust Co. tax department.

Muriel Anfossi has been the company's new department head since June, and she not only works hard but also enjoys her work.

The green-eyed blonde joined the company after finishing high school. "I enjoyed it so much that I stayed on when I was asked to."

Since that time, she has moved through several departments, learning all the related areas of work, while acquiring a commerce degree at Sir George Williams University here.

"Contrary to what most people think, it's extremely interesting work. You're not sitting around doing arithmetic or just filling out income tax returns."

"For one thing, you have to keep up with the tax laws. That's highly technical knowledge, the kind that most businessmen don't have time to investigate."

Miss Anfossi supervises a staff of 23, two-thirds of whom are men. This does not seem to pose any problems or tension.

"I don't think men have resented working for me. As for clients, they don't object to dealing with a woman either."

THE PAUSE THAT REFRESHES

This quartet took time out recently when planning the annual coffee party of the Altar Guild of St. Philip's Church to enjoy a little refreshment of their own. Mrs. John Vickers presides at the tea table. She is joined by Miss Janice Maltby, Canon S. J. Wickens and Miss Rosemary Matthews. The coffee party will take place on Wednesday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., in the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. E. Alcorn, 2620 Lansdowne Road.

GIRL GUIDES

Thirteenth Company — Wednesday will be registration night for the 13th Company, Girl Guides. The meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the Scout Hall on Shelbourne Street. One parent must accompany each Guide and applicant.

Anti-Sewer Group Seen As 'a Small Segment'

A ratenayers group which has urged defeat of the Saanich sewerage referendum this Saturday was called small and unrepresentative Monday by Mayor Hugh Curtis.

"It has to be pointed out that the Saanich Action Committee is a very small organization and is attempting to pass itself off as a fairly widely-based citizens group," he said.

"My understanding is that this is not the case and it's just short of misrepresentation of the group to leave this impression or permit this impression to remain."

Mayor Curtis said the committee's president, Roy Ralfe, was "particularly active" in Gordon Campbell's unsuccessful reeveship campaign last December.

Mr. Campbell himself was "quite active" in the committee and another member, Mrs.

Leslie Belfit, was a defeated council candidate last December.

(Last week, Mr. Campbell challenged Mayor Curtis to a public debate on the referendum. Mr. Curtis agreed subject to the time not conflicting with previous commitments.)

'DISTRESSING'

Mayor Curtis said it is "most distressing they are using a sewer vote as a political weapon" and he thought most Saanich residents will realize the group "represents a very small segment of the public, but the name is carefully designed to suggest the group is widely based and it is not."

He also said that if the vote fails, "the blame can be placed at the door of a minister of health who doesn't understand the purpose of the bylaw and a few frustrated residents who can only react against something, never positively for something—they are the essence of the vote-no philosophy."

Mr. Ralfe replied that the Saanich Action Committee is not using the sewer vote as a political weapon.

He said the committee has 40 to 50 paid-up members but many of them are from other community organizations and "each of these persons may be representing a fairly sizeable group."

He said Mayor Curtis is exaggerating his part in Gordon Campbell's reeveship campaign last December.

"It is true I signed his nomination papers but apart from that I did almost nothing," he said.

IMPARTIALITY

He was chairman of two all-candidates meetings and had been complimented by opponents of Mr. Campbell on his impartiality.

Referring to himself, Mr. Campbell and Mrs. Belfit being members of the committee, he said:

"Surely the mayor does not want people to avoid municipal politics. What is democracy if it is not people proposing and espousing different viewpoints on the same subjects? It would be a pretty undemocratic system if no-one ever had a different view."

He also said council itself is "not a very large group" yet it is spending public money in a campaign urging residents to approve the referendum.

Mr. Ralfe said the Saanich Action Committee is only part of a very large group of people who are concerned with pollution, a subject needing the attention of all levels of government in reaching a final solution.

"We say, why start a major undertaking before this major point is settled," he said.

Six Constables, Police Cadets Given Promotions

Victoria's board of police commissioners Monday approve promotions of two policemen to the rank of first class constable. The two were Const. Juergen Leukfeld and Const. Douglas Sleivert.

The board also approved promotion to second-class constable for Const. Michael Mills and Const. Michael Pearce.

Other promotions were for Peter Lund to Probationer II constable, Nelson Stephen to Probationer I constable, and Cadets John Lane and Richard Mitchell to Cadet Grade II.

In other business the board approved a request to city council to hold the annual bicycle auction for lost and unclaimed goods held by police this year. Date will be Nov. 20, department authorization to call for tenders for four new cars and three motorcycles.

Rites Wednesday For Long-Time City Resident

Services will be held Wednesday for long-time Victoria resident Dr. Bruce Knapp, who died Sunday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was 72.

Born in 1896 in Domeville, Ontario, Dr. Knapp came to this city in 1945 after living in Saskatchewan and Alberta for some time.

While practising here he was a member of the Victoria Medical Society. He retired from practice in 1960.

He was a member of Gizeh Temple, the Victoria Shrine Club and a member of Royal Oakwood Golf and Country Club.

Dr. Knapp is survived by his wife, Lillian Bertha, at 1013 Vancouver St.; three sons, Howard Bruce and James Clarence of Victoria and Stanley Erving of Vancouver; his mother, Mrs. Elsie Knapp of Ottawa; and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p.m. at Chaplin's Funeral Chapel, the Rev. Dr. Hugh McLeod officiating. Interment will be in Royal Oak Burial Park.

New Equipment For Schools To Be Displayed

Over 150 exhibitors will display and demonstrate the latest in school equipment, furnishings, material and supplies at the Pacific Education Showplace in Vancouver Oct. 10 to 12.

The show will be held in the Food and Showmart Building at the Pacific National Exhibition grounds and will follow the annual meeting of the B.C. School Trustees Association in the Bayshore Inn, Oct. 6 to 9.

Co-sponsored by the trustees and the National Audio-Visual Association of Canada, it will be opened by Education Minister Donald Bruce and will likely attract about 10,000 educators and school administrators from western Canada and the north-west U.S.

Workers' Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Sunday they want the Union of B.C. Municipalities to join them in a delegation to Ottawa in protesting cancellation of the federal winter works program. The UBCM earlier condemned cancellation of the program.

HALLOWEEN DRIVE Victoria Helps Save the Children

Victoria contributes more than $10,000 every year to the work of the Save The Children Fund in Korea, Vietnam, Uganda, Morocco, Hong Kong and the Windward Islands.

British Columbia's total offering is around $135,000.

"The B.C. branch of the Save The Children Fund is solely responsible for our projects in these countries," say Mrs. J. S. (Birgitte) Dewhurst, executive secretary, visiting Victoria from her Vancouver headquarters.

"But each year we need more funds to care for distressed children in poverty-ridden areas of the world."

Mrs. Dewhurst spoke in high praise of Mrs. W. W. McGill, Victoria representative and vice-president of the B.C. fund, who organizes a can-collecting drive by Vancouver Island children every Halloween.

"This year the B.C. branch's main project is in Korea, where we are maintaining a children's clinic, a day-care centre and a vocational school."

MILK POWDER

"We are also distributing milk powder among needy children at an annual cost of $3,500."

Danish-born Mrs. Dewhurst returned recently from a tour of Korea and Hong Kong as guest of Canadian Pacific Airlines.

In Korea, she said, the B.C. branch spends $20,000 yearly on a children's clinic; $4,000 on a day-care centre and $3,500 on a vocational school. "We have a full-time staff of 144 in Korea, of whom only three are white people. The Korean people have responded nobly as far as they are able."

Mrs. Dewhurst left her native Denmark in 1946 to work for the United Nations in West Germany. There she met her husband, also working for the UN.

DAY-CARE CENTRE

After their marriage, they went to live in South Africa, where Mrs. Dewhurst became a volunteer worker for the Save The Children Fund. She and her husband came to Canada in 1953.

In Hong Kong recently, Mrs. Dewhurst visited SFC's day-care centre, where more than 100 young children are cared for daily.

"The centre provides baths twice a week for children living in Hong Kong's overcrowded tenement blocks. These are six-storey buildings, with 23 families to a floor. Each family lives in one room and there is only one tap and one lavatory to a floor."

"The sanitary conditions are appalling and we are fighting disease all the time."

Mrs. McGill, who lives at 3441 Mayfair Drive, is now organizing the 1968 Halloween Can Drive for Oct. 31. She is recruiting volunteers from Sunday schools, Girl Guides, Brownies and other youth organizations throughout the Island.

New Owners of Land Register to Vote

Several hundred new owners of Saanich property have so far obtained eligibility certificates to vote in the sewerage referendum Saturday.

Returning officer Gordon Hayward said this morning it will be to the convenience of new property owners to obtain the certificates before polling day.

This will avoid time being lost at the polling station, he said.

Deadline for mailing certificates is Thursday but residents can apply for them in person up to and including polling day at the municipal hall, or at the polling station on Saturday.

Persons who have become new property owners since the last list closed one year ago must obtain the eligibility certifiicates to vote this Saturday. This affects several thousand persons.

Saanich is establishing facilities at the municipal hall to answer queries about the referendum and voting eligibility this week, extending to 9 p.m.

Comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said only factual information on the mechanics of the bylaw will be given out by municipal staff.

Political questions will have to be answered by aldermen, he said.

The referendum, if carried by 60 per cent of those voting, will establish a municipal sanitary sewerage enterprise including consolidation, or amalgamation, of existing sewerage systems.

FAMILY ATMOSPHERE DISTINGUISHES SCHOOL

By DON VIPOND

Beaver Lake elementary school uses a "buddy" system which has older children helping the young ones, principal Jim Chow told the Saanich Peninsula school board Monday night.

He outlined for trustees how the elementary school on the West Saanich Road is using open areas, team-teaching and individual progress to produce a more "natural" approach to education.

The school has been remodelled over the summer to combine four classrooms into one. Teachers work there in teams to help youngsters progress at their own rate, thus eliminating the traditional grade system.

"You can lead a horse to water but you can't make it drink," said the principal, "and you can put everything in front of children but you can't make them learn."

Purpose of the approach is to move away from the program which treats all children the same, to help teachers see pupils as individuals and to remove unnecessary restrictions on the level and direction of learning.

FAR FROM FREE

Mr. Chow said the program is far from a free school in that children don't study whatever they want when they want. They must master skills before advancing to attempt new ones. Emphasis is placed on self-direction and self-discipline, he said.

Toll High In School Gunfight

Students Vs.
Mexican Army

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Army troops and police fought skirmishes with rooftop snipers today after soldiers in armored cars seized a vocational school on the northwest side of Mexico City in a five-hour gun battle.

At least 15 persons including a policeman were killed and 35 students and riot police were wounded.

The area around the vocational school, part of the campus of the national Polytechnical Institute was a shambles. Homes and apartment buildings were shot up; windows were broken; glass, rocks and spent rifle cartridges littered the streets.

Thousands of federal troops were called in to reinforce riot and judicial police, using armored assault cars which resemble tanks on wheels.

The Red Cross Hospital reported the deaths of a riot policeman and 14 students.

The government sent troops in more than 400 assault cars to the Santo Tomas vocational school after riot police and students inside the school had battled for more than five hours with guns, pistols, knives, clubs, Molotov cocktails, stones and tear gas.

It was the most violent skirmish so far in the two-month-long student rebellion against President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

One police official said more than 1,000 students had been arrested in the first six hours of fighting.

Athletes continued to arrive for the 1968 Olympic Games, scheduled to start Oct. 12, and no Mexican Olympic official would comment on the possibility that the games might be cancelled because of the violence, now in its seventh day. But many foreign spectators seemed certain to stay away.

WIRE BRIEFS

False Advertising

TORONTO (CP)—The law against false advertising will be moved on the statute books so that cases can be investigated and prosecuted by the federal government, Ron Bassford, federal minister of consumer and corporate affairs, said today.

Views of Minority

MONTREAL (CP)—The views of Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay on the French language issue are those of a minority in the Quebec cabinet, Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry said today.

Money Missing

PENTICTON (CP)—RCMP were questioning two women today following the discovery of a shortage of a "substantial amount" of funds from a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. An RCMP spokesman said the shortage of cash could run into six figures.

France to Stay Ally

PARIS (Reuters)—Premier Maurice Couve de Murville indicated Monday night France will not withdraw from the Atlantic Alliance when its 20-year membership pledge comes to an end next year.

SNOWPLOWS KEPT BUSY

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—Snowplows were piling three-foot-high banks of snow on roads in the Vulcan area, 50 miles north of here, following a weekend storm that flattened as much as 150,000 acres of grain. The snowstorm hit southern Alberta from Red Deer south to the Alberta-Montana border.

8 Executive Homes Bombed In Toronto Mystery Raids

Aircraft Firms Target of Blasts

TORONTO (CP)—The homes or property of eight top executives of Hawker Siddeley (Canada) Ltd., and de Havilland Aircraft of Canada, Ltd., were bombed early today. There were no injuries and damage was reported to be slight.

Published reports here said police believed the explosions could be the work of terrorists protesting the Vietnam war, but Harold Adamson, deputy police chief, said police have "issued no statements on our theories."

He added: "I won't comment now on any theories we do have."

Hawker Siddeley's subsidiary, de Havilland, supplies Caribou transport planes for the United States war effort in Vietnam.

The bombs, apparently home-made, were placed at the front of homes in the suburban boroughs of North York and Etobicoke between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. EDT. Police said damage was limited to windows.

W. Wallace Muir, a Hawker-Siddeley vice-president, said whoever planted the bombs apparently did not want anyone hurt.

"They just wanted to scare us, but I don't know why," he said.

James Mackey, Metropolitan Toronto police chief, is personally leading the investigation into the blasts.

NO MOTIVE ESTABLISHED

There were later reports of bomb damage to property of two former employees of the firms. Russell Bannock, former sales manager of de Havilland, who left his job in January, reported his home damaged.

Larry Clark, a former employee of Hawker Siddeley, said his wife heard a noise during the night, and when he ran out of gasoline on his way to work today he found a hole blasted in his car gas tank.

A spokesman for the city police department said no motive has been established for the bombings and it was not known whether the explosions were the work of one man or of a team.

The spokesman said one man could have carried out the bombings by using time fuses but he thought that "since the bombing locations were fairly widespread this is more likely to be the work of a team."

NOT LABOR ISSUE

One Hawker Siddeley official said he does not believe labor problems were involved.

P. Y. Davoud, a vice-president of de Havilland who ran to his front room to find two windows shattered, said the bombings were the work of a highly-organized team, not someone trying to settle a grudge against a single person or even a single firm.

Hawker Siddeley, 90-per-cent British controlled, has worldwide interests in manufacturing steel, aircraft and other transportation equipment. De Havilland is a Hawker Siddeley subsidiary.

Other properties hit were occupied by William Boggs, de Havilland president; John Ready, vice-president and secretary of Hawker Siddeley; Archibald Baile, senior vice-president of finance for Hawker Siddeley, and vice-presidents D. G. Kettering and William Walker of Hawker Siddeley.

After the first few explosions, police raced to warn other executives of the companies.

Czechs Score NATO

PRAGUE (AP)—Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist party said today the Soviet invasion should not be used as an excuse to revive the cold war, a development it declared is being talked up in capitals of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

There is a fundamental difference between the solidarity with Czechoslovakia expressed by the Communist parties of Western Europe and "the pseudosolidarity of those who shed tears over the fate of 'little Czechoslovakia' but at the same time invoke the cold war spirit," Rude Pravo said.

The editorial in the Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper, which avoided blaming Moscow for increasing East-West tension, marked the first such criticism of the West seen here since the Aug. 20 invasion.

It appeared as Czechoslovak sources said the Russians had agreed in principle to withdraw all but about seven divisions, or about 100,000, of the 500,000 troops sent into Czechoslovakia last month.

They said the pullout hinged on purging of certain office holders and a further crack-down on the press.

PRESSURE ON PRESS

The editorial, regarded as evidence of pressure on the Czechoslovak press to prove its true communism, said it was embarrassing that "the further we get from Aug. 21 (the first full day of the occupation), the more frequently they speak of cold war in NATO capitals."

"Revival of the cold war is of no benefit to either East or West for it can only harm the normalization of our economy and political, social and private life," Rude Pravo said.

'Little Old Lady' Wins Oil Bonanza But Richter Will Take Second Look

By JOHN MIKA

The proverbial little old lady today won first prize in the biggest raffle that's ever come to town—first pick of all she wanted in oil and gas exploration rights on 8.5 million hillside acres flanking the Peace River plateau.

Miss A. L. Maloan, who soon will celebrate her 79th birthday after living quietly at 3200 Glasgow since 1927, said she was "absolutely dismayed at becoming a celebrity."

She was one of hundreds of "dummy buyers" rounded up at tea parties and beer parlors for a stampede into the splashiest, if not most important, oil rush ever to hit the province's capital.

The whole affair—designed by the mines department to inject a little interest into an area persistently avoided by the oil companies—was such a dream-come-true that Mines Minister Frank Richter faces a nightmarish decision Wednesday morning.

"We may have to cancel the whole thing after all," he told The Times even before the first of several draws took place in the new provincial museum's fancy theatre.

"None of the bids have to be accepted and I'll take a very careful look at the whole thing when I get back tomorrow morning."

NO HANKY-PANKY

"We won't confirm any sales until then, because we don't want any suggestion of any kind of hanky-panky at an oil sale."

"We certainly didn't expect this kind of reaction because this had been such a neglected area but, if nothing else, this will give us a measure of reaction from the industry and we will see where we go from here tomorrow."

Here is his problem.

For years, various exploration permits on the Rocky mountains and foothills beside the Peace plateau have been lapsed by oil companies who lost interest in the high costs and no results of exploration on rocky slopes.

NEVER NOMINATED

Every time a quarterly exploration rights sale has been held, the department asks the industry to "nominate" government land they would like to see put up for the next bonus auction. The slopes were never nominated.

Concerned about this dead area in the midst of excited activity elsewhere, the department cast around for a way to stimulate some exploration interest in the slopes.

It decided to try an approach it took only once before—back in 1960 when the still-novel offshore areas were put-up for bid as a pure speculation by oil companies.

To induce interest in the undersea area, the department eliminated the bonus auction system and merely announced it would hold a draw among the applicants to determine who could choose the acreage he wanted at the nominal government annual fee for $250 per parcel for a permit and a nickel an acre for rental merely for exploration purposes.

SEDATE DRAW

That experiment saw 17 companies turn out to put their names in the hat for a sedate draw—and it resulted ultimately in the current explorations by SEDCO off-shore drilling rig which the department still hopes will make a major strike.

Attempting to repeat its success of arousing interest, it advertised earlier this year that it would put up the 8.5 million dormant acres the same way—no "bonus" bidding by applicants, just everybody taking their chances on a draw for the privilege of paying the nominal fee.

This way, if all the land was taken up, the government coffers would only be increased by about $500,000 in permit and acreage fees, compared with the normal $2 to $4 million which is realized by regular bonus auctions for exploration permits.

The response of the oil companies was as electrifying as it was unexpected.

Unlike the totally untried offshore area of 1960, the Rocky Mountain slopes were known to be poor and expensive prospects for oil exploration—but at least they were known intimately by the industry.

'DIRT CHEAP'

With no extra bonuses to pay for the right to explore, even relatively unpromising land became attractive at the "dirt cheap" price of the nominal permit fees.

"I guess they decided that the money saved on bonus bidding could be spent on exploration so that they'd have a better chance of finding something if it was

Trudeau 'Hushed Up' Civil Spy Affair

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says a civil servant who tried to raise money by selling military secrets was caught by the RCMP earlier this year and forced to quit his job.

The newspaper says it

"pieced together" the story of the former civil servant, whom the RCMP refused to identify but who was a one-time employee of the defence department.

The man began his career in spying while working for the director-general of intelligence and security and tried to sell his secrets after he switched to another unnamed but "non-sensitive" government department.

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice

Minister Turner said today the government decided it was "not in the public interest" to prosecute a government employee investigated by the RCMP for suspected illegal acts.

He refused to give any details of the case despite a barrage of opposition questions in the Commons.

The newspaper says the case broke last January but was "hushed up by the RCMP and the federal justice department" after Prime Minister Trudeau, then justice minister, ruled that prosecution of the man would not be in the public interest.

Ottawa Heeds Anderson's Get-to-Work Plea

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons throne-speech debate ended two days early Monday after complaints from two Liberal freshmen that the whole exercise had been useless and irrelevant.

The general debate was cut off by all-party agreement late in its sixth day, leaving the way clear for the Commons to settle into its regular business today.

David Anderson (L-Esquimaux-Saanich), a 31-year-old lawyer formerly with the external affairs department, said valuable time was being devoted to matters he considered irrelevant.

Members did not come to Parliament to hear warmed-up election speeches but to carry out the government program and to put forward private members' bills and motions.

"It is extremely important for the House to realize that we, the younger and newer members, have not been satisfied with the performance in this chamber that we have witnessed during the throne speech debate."

Mr. Anderson spoke of a deliberate policy by older members of the House, including House leaders of the various parties, to let new members speak in the debate when they knew there was little chance of a vote being taken.

"I feel they should be aware that we shall not continue to tolerate this tokenism which allows us to speak but does not allow any decision to be made on the basis of what we have said..."

Mr. Anderson used only five minutes of the 30 allowed him.

The other unhappy Liberal was Ontario MP Norman Cafik, a 29-year-old commercial publisher from Pickering, who said opposition non-confidence motions had tied the House up in a ceremonial debate which cost about $1,000,000 and did nothing for Parliament or the people.

'ELIMINATE RITUAL'

"I realize that it is traditional to go through this ritual, but perhaps if it were dispensed with in much higher regard by the Canadian people."

"I do not believe that by going through this debate we are serving any useful purpose."

Conservative MP Heath Macquarrie attacked as meanly-mouthered a letter sent by External Affairs Minister Sharp to Secretary-General U Thant on the possibility of raising the Biafra issue in the United Nations.

Mr. Sharp's letter had said that it "could be deceptive" to raise the issue.

"It would be a shocking thing to have division while thousands die," Mr. Macquarrie commented.

"This is the kind of utterance which would make Neville Chamberlain appear as one of the most vigorous and aggressive men of all times."

Mr. Macquarrie conceded there would be danger in flying in supplies.

"But are we in this new generation of such little faith that we as a nation and as a people are afraid of division and afraid of danger?"

"Forsake your fears, discard your technical niceties, throw off your protective convention of protocol and assist the people in Biafra whose suffering is indescribable..."

SCHOOL ENTRY DENIED INDIANS

TORONTO (CP)—Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Scarborough West, today demanded that the departments of the attorney-general, and education take the school board of Armstrong, Ont., to court for refusing to enroll children of squawking Indian families.

"No local board of education in this province has the right, under the Department of Education Act, to exclude children from its schools, for reasons such as those advanced by the Armstrong board, Mr. Lewis said in a statement.

The Ontario Indian-Eskimo conference in London, Ont., was told Saturday that Indian children at Armstrong, 135 miles north of Port Arthur, have been denied entry to the town's two-room, nine-grade school.

Yvonne McRae, director of the Lakehead branch of the Ontario Indian-Eskimo Association, said Armstrong ratepayers have stated publicly they believe the Indian students would lower the level of the school.

NEED CHANGES
The Indian children can get into the school only if senior governments first improve the living standards of their families, she said.

The Indians are a group which left the White Sands reserve near Lake Nipigon shortly after the Second World War and have been wandering and squatting since. They are living in one-room shacks on the edge of Armstrong.

The local school board argues that the Indians do not have to be admitted because they are not taxpayers, Mrs. McRae said.

Health Minister Matthew Dymond, who attended the London conference, said a report would be made to Premier John Robarts, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart and Education Minister William Davis.

Our first note is headed "Dog", and its subject is a smooth-haired fox terrier friendly and bright who answers to the name of Twiggy.

I can report that Twiggy, a black-and-white spayed female, likes to take people on walks. She eats one meal a day—evening—of dog meal garnished with selected table scraps, and the mistress who must give her up tells me that Twiggy is house-broken.

Last year, Twiggy's owner fell seriously ill. For a while it seemed unlikely that she would recover.

Now she is convalescing, but painfully and very slowly, and even the care of a little year-old dog is beyond her.

She will be moving from her house to an apartment soon. Friends have suggested that her best course would be to have Twiggy "put to sleep," but this she will not do. Her dog, she points out, is young and healthy, with love to give elsewhere.

All this I learned when she phoned me one evening last week. She was half in tears, as who can blame her, but her message came through plainly enough.

She hopes that somewhere in Victoria, a middle-aged couple whose children are grown and gone will give Twiggy a new home. (I'm sorry, kids. This one is not for you.)

If any such couple is interested, please call me.

"Be nice to own a string of rental boats, huh? Watch one party after another of fishermen shove off, mark down their times of departure, and when they return collect a fee for the use of each craft?"

No doubt that part of the operation is pleasant enough.

But the marina business is not without its trials and tribulations, some of which are provided by the Mr. Fixit who refuses to let well enough alone. The internal combustion engine is his specialty, and when it comes to outboard motors, he's convinced that he has forgotten more than the marine mechanics know.

Here's an up-island operator. We may as well call him Pete. He has just sweated the last of his boats in at dusk. A couple of salmon gleam silver in the fish-box, and the fellows who caught them are unloading their gear.

They pay up and are about to shove off when Mr. Fixit turns to Pete the boatman.

"You know," he says, "that six-horse Chugit of yours was running a little rough when we started out, so I figured she was set too lean, so I turned the low-speed control knob just a touch. Now she purrs like a kitten."

Pete thanks him with an inward grin, and off goes Mr. Fixit, well pleased with himself. What he doesn't know is that Pete, whose outboard carbs are tuned to a hair, keeps them that way by disconnecting their control knobs.

Mr. Fixit can twiddle 'em this way and that to his heart's content, and the motor will still purr like a kitten!

As every Victorian knows, our city is never visited by such fogs as Vancouver deserves. But our haze does sometimes thicken a mile, and on Monday morning, the University of Victoria campus was an eerie place.

Its buildings lurked dimly in a horizonless wasteland, nobody with a lick of sense drove the ring-road without at least his dimmers on, and occasionally visible in the mists were little, soury-looking figures.

Many of these were freshmen of Uvic's 2,000, and for them the fog (Damn... I went and said it!) reflected a state of mind.

Most of the frosh didn't know quite where they were going, or what awaited them when they got there.

Well, one thing that does is Christmas exams, a collective horror that materializes at impossible speed. Study young ladies and gentlemen, study, because the year-end flunkage is going to be something terrible.

B.C. Ferry Faces Long Hull

The highways department is planning to make one of our queens king-size.

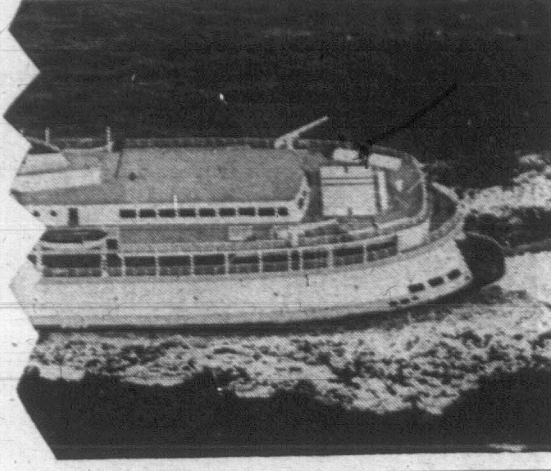

The experiment would extend one of the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferries to increase capacity by at least 50 cars.

Highways Minister Wesley Black Monday said an announcement will be made soon on the proposal which involves cutting a ferry in half and inserting an additional midships section.

Premier Bennett indicated about two years ago that the idea would be investigated and last spring ferry fleet manager Monty Aldous revealed that studies showed the capacity of the Queens could be increased by 50 to 200 cars depending on the length of the added centre section.

Mr. Black would give no details about the coming program except to add that it will include installation of holding tanks for toilet wastes so that they could be discharged into sewers at the terminals rather than dumped overboard as at present.

He was commenting on Health Minister Ralph Lofmark's statement that all ships, not just pleasure craft, eventually will be required to stop discharging toilet wastes into B.C. waters.

Boat Found; Fisherman Feared Lost

Police, Neighbors Joined in Search

Police and civilian boats are searching the waters south of Active Pass today for George Ernest Hughes, 52, of North Pender Island, missing since late Sunday.

Mr. Hughes' 12-foot outboard was found washed ashore on Razor Point late Monday, RCMP at Ganges said. He was reported missing earlier in the day.

He failed to return from fishing during a weekend fish derby in the area.

Mr. Hughes and his wife have been residents of the Island for about four years.

Community Centre, School and Park?

The Lambrick Estate in Gordon Head will be developed on a multi-use basis.

First indication of how this can be achieved was given to the Saanich lands and planning committee Monday night.

Still in the tentative stage and subject to many considerations, the schematic plan envisaged:

- School site on west side, 10.4 acres;
- Park in centre, 13.25 acres;
- Community Centre (2.84 acres) and multiple residential site (3.54 acres) to immediate north;
- Two further multiple-residential areas, to south and east, one of 4.45 acres near Feltham Road and the other of 6.07 acres near Tyndall.

The scheme involves a trade with the school board, yet to be approved, under which Saanich would acquire a site set aside for a future school at McMorran and Tyndall.

In addition, Torquay Drive would be stopped and relocated slightly to the south, making a dividing line between the community centre and one apartment site and the school park area.

Municipal planner Tom Loney said the relationship between the various uses offers "unlimited scope" for the use of joint facilities.

The Lambrick Estate, comprising 44.39 acres of undeveloped land, was purchased by Saanich in 1965 for $250,000 from the family of former Reeve A. G. Lambrick.

The property lies within a slightly broader area bounded by Torquay-Kemmore-Tyndall-Feltham.

Mr. Loney said Monday night it was "never our intention" that the Lambrick Estate be one big municipal park. Such a size wasn't needed.

(When the estate was purchased in September, 1965, a Saanich statement said:

"Undoubtedly consideration will be given to establishing a major district park on the site and, depending upon negotiations with school board officials, it is hoped that a part of it will also serve as the basis for a senior school site adjoining the park."

"Land within the estate not required for public use can be subdivided and sold for residential purposes. In this way, the municipality will be in a position to recover a portion of the purchase price."

Saanich also indicated at that time that a recreational facility will probably be located on the estate.

This was confirmed when ratepayers approved the $1.25 million recreation referendum last year which concluded $470,000 for a community centre and indoor swimming pool at the Lambrick Estate.

The lands and planning committee agreed to refer the plan to a meeting of the joint Saanich-school board planning committee next month.

Ask The Times

Q. What are the basic qualifications for joining the Victoria police force? How many recruits are taken on each year?—D.M.O.

A. A recruit on the city force must be a Canadian citizen or British subject. He must have Grade 12, although this may be either general or university entrance. Physically, the recruit must be between 5 feet 10½ inches and 6 feet 3 inches. He must have 20-20 vision without optical aids. He must pass a rigid physical examination and have two character references from his area. He must be able to drive a motor vehicle and have no criminal record. According to the Victoria department, certain minor infractions under the liquor or traffic acts are sometimes overlooked. Recruiting is only done when vacancies occur.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Driver Licence Suspensions At Record High

Demerit System May Be Answer To Bad Driving

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Monday said driver licence suspensions by the motor vehicle branch have been skyrocketing.

He said 4,566 licences were suspended in the first eight months of this year compared with 3,471 for the corresponding period last year which had proved to be a record year for suspensions.

Mr. Peterson said small traffic court fines have not proved a deterrent to bad driving.

The new demerit system for a systematic procedure in licence suspension along with the experiment—beginning in Greater Victoria Oct. 1 with "violation reports" by traffic police in place of court charges may help reduce the number of bad driving cases.

MAY TAKE COURSE

Mr. Peterson also said that in some cases, a motorist may be allowed to keep his licence if he takes and succeeds in a defensive driving course. Such courses now are available in night school.

There were close to 50,000 auto accidents in B.C. last year, up from 44,187 in 1966. And the first half of this year has produced 4,000 more accidents than over the comparable period last year.

"For the great mass of motorists, the few dollars they have to pay as a fine does not have any meaning," the attorney-general said.

"But everyone values the privilege of driving and the object of our program is to increase safety on our provincial highways through driver licence control."

GREATER RESPECT

"We believe this will lead to safer driving practices and greater respect on the part of motorists."

Brochures explaining the points system and the new driving law will be mailed out this week to all drivers in the county of Victoria.

Under the driver licence control program, a motorist is assigned points for various driving offences under the Motor Vehicle Act. This ranges from two points for driving through a red light to 10 points for driving where the right to obtain a licence is suspended.

When a driver accumulates six points, he gets a warning letter from the superintendent. Point values will last from one to five years.

Uvic Senate Nominations Close Monday

Nominations for student representatives on the senate of the University of Victoria opened Monday.

Those planning to run for the three available student seats will have to file nomination papers before next Monday at 4 p.m.

Two members of the undergraduate Alma Mater Society will be elected by students Oct. 11. One member of the Graduate Students' Society will also be elected.

Candidates must be taking a full course load of studies and have marks above average. Every member of the AMS and GSS is eligible to vote.

The university first opened its senate, or academic governing body, to students early this year. The change in policy was in line with recommendations of the national Duff-Berndahl report on university government, and was made in step with many other universities across Canada.

$2.45 a Pound Paid For Champion Steer

Gordon Michell has a golden touch with cattle.

His 1,140-pound Angus steer was first named grand champion of the Pacific National 4-H Stock show. It then fetched a staggering $2,793, or $2.45 a pound, when bought at auction Saturday by Woodward Stores Ltd. The beef has great prestige value.

The current market price for top beef is 28 cents a pound.

It was the top price in tough bidding among nearly 1,000 people, some from business firms associated with food products.

Gordon is 17 years old and a veteran member of the Saanich Peninsula 4-H Beef Club. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Michell, 2598 Island View Rd.

Young local cattlemen have shone in recent 4-H competition. Gordon's fellow club member, Danny Speller of Braefoot Road, had the top 4-H steer at the Pacific National Exhibition.

The Saanich club is led by Mrs. Tom O'Reilly, wife of the herd manager at Woodwynn Farm.

Gordon's talent with cattle has been recognized before. He spent a week in Lexington, Kentucky, this summer cattle judging as a representative of the B.C. Angus Association.

Last year his 4-H activities won him a trip to Toronto.

Saturday's auction which included swine and sheep, produced sales totalling $54,589.38.

Mediation Member Leaves Post

John David Drew, executive secretary of the British Columbia Mediation Commission, has resigned after working two months for the three-man labor inquiry board, it was announced Monday.

Commission chairman John Parker said the resignation of 37-year-old Mr. Drew is effective immediately.

"He felt he had done what he could do in getting us organized and to give us a proper conception of the commission's structure," Mr. Parker said.

Mr. Drew said he left the $17,500-a-year post to resume his career with the federal government.

He said he plans to return to Ottawa Thursday to become planning co-ordinator for the department of manpower and immigration.

The commission has no plans to fill the vacancy, Mr. Parker said.

B.C. Park Promoter Dies Here at Age 57

A man who did much to promote public interest in the need for provincial parks, died Monday.

Lt. Col. Seymour English Park, 57, 3880 Merriman Drive, passed away following a prolonged illness.

He was one of the original members of the parks division when it was formed in 1948 under the department of lands and forest.

An ardent camper himself, Mr. Park frequently travelled throughout the province to promote an interest in outdoor life and to awaken the public in developing and expanding the provincial park system.

He also directed several schools for family camping.

Born in Bangalore, British India, he was educated at St. Paul's, Dargaveling. He also attended art school and studied journalism in London, England.

He served in the army during the Second World War.

Mr. Park was well known in militia circles.

He started as a private in the Seaforth Highlanders, Vancouver, and rose to become lieutenant colonel of the Canadian Scottish and senior staff officer for Vancouver Island. He retired from the militia in 1962, following 27 years of service.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday for Stanley Rickinson, a long-time Victoria resident who died while on a hunting trip north of Fort St. James. He was 62.

Born in Winnipeg in 1906, he came to Victoria some 60 years ago with his family. He attended Kingston St. School, Victoria West School and Victoria High School.

In his youth he was a soccer and lacrosse player in the area and in later years an ardent hunter and fisherman. He lived in View Royal.

Mr. Rickinson was also a close friend of George "Rebel" Mowat, cheerful tourist guide and Victoria publicist, who died Sunday in Ireland while on a world tour. The two often joked about who would survive the other.

Mr. Rickinson was a pioneer of the trail between Whitehorse and Dawson and spent about 15 years in the Yukon. He went there in 1925 as a messboy on riverboats and later drove caterpillar tractors on the week-long mail and supply trip between the two cities for seven winters.

For the past 26 years Mr. Rickinson had worked as a foreman machinist at HMC Dockyard. He was a member of Mt. Newton Lodge No. 89 AF and AM, BCR.

His is survived by his wife Agnes; brother Ray, deputy minister of social welfare for the province; two daughters, Raynette and Colleen; a son, Tommy, of Victoria; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes, to be followed by cremation.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to give opinions on subjects. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps, or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

1-in-3 Chance Scholarship Winner Here

One Rhodes Scholar will be chosen from the three universities in British Columbia this year.

Michael Brown, secretary of the scholarship trust in B.C., announced today applications for the scholarship—probably the best known international award—would close Oct. 25.

A selection committee will meet early in November to decide the provincial candidate. The award is for approximately $3,000 a year for two or three years of study at Oxford University in England.

Officials believe maintenance costs are about 15 per cent lower for underground wires. There are less frequent, but more expensive, repairs.

The telephone company spent $6.5 million this year on underground wiring.

Underground Wiring Increasing Despite Costs to Ratepayers

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Underground utility wiring is increasing in Saanich despite high initial costs.

And municipal officials hope the trend gathers momentum. Planner Tom Loney said Monday night 67 lots were created with underground wiring last year and 167 so far this year.

Average cost per lot is $550 and the average cost-sharing is $150 from B.C. Hydro, $150 from the developer and $250 carried by local improvement.

In a report to the municipal lands and planning committee, he said there has been excellent co-operation with the developers and an increasing public interest in the aesthetics of putting overhead wires into the ground, eliminating poles.

The new municipal subdivision bylaw encouraged underground wiring and competition between developers did the same.

He added, however, that B.C. Hydro is reluctant to look at what is a higher initial capital cost. "They have not accepted that in the long run it is the cheaper thing to do," he said.

"We should press for this by every means at our disposal," said committee chairman Ald. Edith Gunning.

"It is the thing of the future. It seems a waste of money to put it above ground."

At the Union of B.C. Municipalities annual conference in Vancouver last week, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis called on all municipalities to exert pressure on hydro and telephone utilities to put distribution underground.

B.C. lagged in this respect behind most areas of North America and Western Europe, he said.

Mayor Curtis was reporting results of an underground wiring feasibility study prepared by a private engineering consultant for the UBCM.

He also said B.C. Hydro has steadily resisted any move towards underground wiring on the grounds the cost is prohibitive.

In reply, Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, denied charges of delays and said there are "plenty" of distribution lines underground in B.C. cities.

Hydro was willing to negotiate underground wiring with any city that wants it.

Estimated costs of underground wiring are about three times higher than overhead. Frequency of maintenance may be less but cost of individual repairs are considerably higher.

"I see no particular economy," he said.

A B.C. Telephone Company spokesman said in residential subdivisions the cost of underground wiring is rarely more than three times higher than overhead wires.

Officials believe maintenance costs are about 15 per cent lower for underground wires. There are less frequent, but more expensive, repairs.

The telephone company spent $6.5 million this year on underground wiring.

Toll High In School Gunfight

Students Vs.
Mexican Army

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Army troops and police fought skirmishes with rooftop snipers today after soldiers in armored cars seized a vocational school on the northwest side of Mexico City in a five-hour gun battle.

At least 15 persons including a policeman were killed and 35 students and riot police were wounded.

The area around the vocational school, part of the campus of the national Polytechnical Institute, was a shambles. Homes and apartment buildings were shot up; windows were broken; glass, rocks and spent rifle cartridges littered the streets.

Thousands of federal troops were called in to reinforce riot and judicial police, using armored assault cars which resemble tanks on wheels.

The Red Cross Hospital reported the deaths of a riot policeman and 14 students.

The government sent troops in more than 400 assault cars to the Santo Tomas vocational school after riot police and students inside the school had battled for more than five hours with guns, pistols, knives, clubs, Molotov cocktails, stones and tear gas.

It was the most violent skirmish so far in the two-month-long student rebellion against President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

One police official said more than 1,000 students had been arrested in the first six hours of fighting.

Athletes continued to arrive for the 1968 Olympic Games, scheduled to start Oct. 12, and no Mexican Olympic official would comment on the possibility that the games might be cancelled because of the violence, now in its seventh day. But many foreign spectators seemed certain to stay away.

Aircraft Firms Target of Blasts

TORONTO (CP)—The homes or property of eight top executives of Hawker Siddeley (Canada) Ltd., and de Havilland Aircraft of Canada, Ltd., were bombed early today. There were no injuries and damage was reported to be slight.

Published reports here said police believed the explosions could be the work of terrorists protesting the Vietnam war, but Harold Adamson, deputy police chief, said police have "issued no statements on our theories."

He added: "I won't comment now on any theories we do have."

Hawker Siddeley's subsidiary, de Havilland, supplies Caribou transport planes for the United States war effort in Vietnam.

The bombs, apparently home-made, were placed at the front of homes in the suburban boroughs of North York and Etobicoke between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. EDT. Police said damage was limited to windows.

W. Wallace Muir, a Hawker-Siddeley vice-president, said whoever planted the bombs apparently did not want anyone hurt.

"They just wanted to scare us, but I don't know why," he said.

James Mackey, Metropolitan Toronto police chief, is personally leading the investigation into the blasts.

NO MOTIVE ESTABLISHED

There were later reports of bomb damage to property of two former employees of the firms. Russell Bannock, former sales manager of de Havilland, who left his job in January, reported his home damaged.

Larry Clark, a former employee of Hawker Siddeley, said his wife heard a noise during the night, and when he ran out of gasoline on his way to work today he found a hole blasted in his car gas tank.

A spokesman for the city police department said no motive has been established for the bombings and it was not known whether the explosions were the work of one man or a team.

The spokesman said one man could have carried out the bombings by using time fuses but he thought that "since the bombing locations were fairly widespread this is more likely to be the work of a team."

NOT LABOR ISSUE

One Hawker Siddeley official said he does not believe labor problems were involved.

P. Y. Davoud, a vice-president of de Havilland who ran to his front room to find two windows shattered, said the bombings were the work of a "highly organized team, not someone trying to settle a grudge against a single person or even a single firm."

Hawker Siddeley, 90-per-cent British controlled, has worldwide interests in manufacturing steel, aircraft and other transportation equipment. De Havilland is a Hawker Siddeley subsidiary.

Other properties hit were occupied by William Boggs, de Havilland president; John Ready, vice-president and secretary of Hawker Siddeley; Archibald Baillie, senior vice-president of finance for Hawker Siddeley, and vice-presidents D.G. Kettering and William Walker of Hawker Siddeley.

After the first few explosions, police raced to warn other executives of the companies.

Czechs Score NATO

PRAGUE (AP)—Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist party said today the Soviet invasion should not be used as an excuse to revive the cold war, a development it declared is being talked up in capitals of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

There is a fundamental difference between the solidarity with Czechoslovakia expressed by the Communist parties of Western Europe and "the pseudosolidarity of those who shed tears over the fate of 'little Czechoslovakia' but at the same time invoke the cold war spirit," Rude Pravo said.

The editorial in the Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper, which avoided blaming Moscow for increasing East-West tension, marked the first such criticism of the West seen here since the Aug. 20 invasion. It appeared as Czechoslovak sources said the Russians had agreed in principle to withdraw all but about seven divisions, or about 100,000, of the 500,000 troops sent into Czechoslovakia last month.

They said the pullout hinged on purging of certain office holders and a further crack-down on the press.

PRESSURE ON PRESS

The editorial, regarded as evidence of pressure on the Czechoslovak press to prove its true communism, said it was embarrassing that "the further we get from Aug. 21 (the first full day of the occupation), the more frequently they speak of cold war in NATO capitals."

"Revival of the cold war is of no benefit to either East or West for it can only harm the normalization of our economy and political, social and private life," Rude Pravo said.

'Little Old Lady' Wins Oil Bonanza But Richter Will Take Second Look

By JOHN MIKA

The proverbial little old lady today won first prize in the biggest raffle that's ever come to town—first pick of all she wanted in oil and gas exploration rights on 3.5 million hillside acres flanking the Peace River plateau.

Miss A. L. Maloan, who soon will celebrate her 79th birthday after living quietly at 3200 Glasgow since 1927, said she was "absolutely dismayed at becoming a celebrity."

She was one of hundreds of "dummy buyers" rounded up at tea parties and beer parlors for a stampede into the splashiest, if not most important, oil rush ever to hit the province's capital.

Local lawyers and others were retained to recruit these dummy buyers, apparently.

PUB-CRAWLING

One small Calgary firm representative who got in on the action late complained that all the legal firms in town were sewn up so he spent the last two days pub-crawling and trying to sign up university students to go to the sale for him.

He made the mistake of trying to recruit a Times reporter. "He was offering $2.50 an hour and a minimum of $7.50 to us. There was a university student with him showing him around so I guess he was after university students," the reporter said.

"In any event, he said we had to be 21."

Ernest Hudson, a local investment counsellor, tried the tea party route in recruiting and he had no trouble with legal ages—having been the one who came up with the 79-year-old winner.

Miss Maloan said she and her brother came to the sale at the request of Mr. Hudson, which was relayed to her through some mutual friends.

When her lucky ticket — No.

145—was drawn, she left everything in his hands and a battery of back-up men went to work picking a total of 1.6 million acres in 27 different parcels.

OVERNIGHT FORTUNE

If the sale is confirmed, the government fee will be $6,750 for the permits and $100,000 for the first year's nickel-and-acre rental, but rumors have it that the permits easily could be turned over to interested oil companies for a total of $500,000 overnight.

Mr. Hudson said he was hired to be "responsible for finding people to go down to the sale for a group of Calgary people who are in the exploration business, but not oil companies."

"I noticed that one firm at the sale here showed up with 117 people to put their names in, and I also noticed a lot of high-priced lawyers in the crowd of proxies," he said.

"I got 25 people but only 21 of them showed up this morning—but the first winner was one of them."

Neither Miss Maloan nor Mr. Hudson would say whether she would receive any money for her participation, and a John Fry, who described himself as being in charge of the group, asked the Times to stop questioning them.

After Miss Maloan's backers were through picking the parcels they wanted to apply for—it was later announced they would be registered in the name of lawyer R. M. McKay of Victoria—more draws were held.

The whole affair—designed by the mines department to inject a little interest into an area persistently avoided by the oil companies—was such a dream-come-true that Mines Minister Frank Richter faces a nightmarish decision Wednesday morning.

"We may have to cancel the whole thing after all," he told The Times even before the first of several draws took place in the new provincial museum's fancy theatre.

"None of the bids have to be accepted and I'll take a very careful look at the whole thing when I get back tomorrow morning."

NO HANKY-PANKY

"We won't confirm any sales until then, because we don't want any suggestion of any kind of hanky-panky at an oil sale."

"We certainly didn't expect this kind of reaction because this had been such a neglected area but, if nothing else, this will give us a measure of reaction from the industry and we will see where we go from here tomorrow."

Here is his problem. For years, various exploration permits on the Rocky Mountains and foothills beside the Peace plateau have been lapsed by oil companies who lost interest in the high costs and no results of exploration on rocky slopes. Every time a quarterly ex-

Trudeau 'Hushed Up' Civil Spy Affair

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says a civil servant who tried to raise money by selling military secrets was caught by the RCMP earlier this year and forced to quit his job. The newspaper says it

"pieced together" the story of the former civil servant, whom the RCMP refused to identify but who was a one-time employee of the defence department.

The man began his career in spying while working for the director-general of intelligence and security and tried to sell his secrets after he switched to another unnamed but "non-sensitive" government department.

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Turner said today the government decided it was "not in the public interest" to prosecute a government employee investigated by the RCMP for suspected illegal acts.

He refused to give any details of the case despite a barrage of opposition questions in the Commons.

The newspaper says the case broke last January but was "hushed up" by the RCMP and the federal justice department after Prime Minister Trudeau, then justice minister, ruled that prosecution of the man would not be in the public interest.

SEARCHED FOR BUYERS

The civil servant attracted the interest of the RCMP as he searched for buyers for his

Ottawa Heeds Anderson's Get-to-Work Plea

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons throne-speech debate ended two days early Monday after complaints from two Liberal freshmen that the whole exercise had been useless and irrelevant.

The general debate was cut

... sets example

off by all-party agreement late in its sixth day, leaving the way clear for the Commons to settle into its regular business today.

David Anderson (L-Esquimault-Saanich), a 31-year-old lawyer formerly with the external affairs department, said valuable time was being devoted to matters he considered irrelevant.

Members did not come to Parliament to hear warmed-up election speeches but to carry out the government program and to put forward private members' bills and motions.

"It is extremely important for the House to realize that we, the younger and newer members, have not been satisfied with the performance in this chamber that we have witnessed during the throne speech debate."

Mr. Anderson spoke of a deliberate policy by older members of the House, including House leaders of the various parties, to let new members speak in the debate when they knew there was little chance of a vote being taken.

"I feel they should be aware that we shall not continue to tolerate this tokenism which allows us to speak but does not allow any decision to be made on the basis of what we have said."

Mr. Anderson used only five minutes of the 30 allowed him.

The other unhappy Liberal was Ontario MP Norman Cafik, a 29-year-old commercial publisher from Pickering, who said opposition non-confidence motions had tied the House up in a ceremonial debate which cost about $1,000,000 and did nothing for Parliament or the people.

ELIMINATE RITUAL

"I realize that it is traditional to go through this ritual, but perhaps if it were dispensed with, Parliament would be held in much higher regard by the Canadian people."

"I do not believe that by going through this debate we are serving any useful purpose."

Conservative MP Heath Macquarrie attacked as mean-spirited a letter sent by External Affairs Minister Sharp to Secretary-General U Thant on the possibility of raising the Biafra issue in the United Nations.

Mr. Sharp's letter had said that it "could be devised" to raise the issue.

"It would be a shocking thing to have division while thousands die," Mr. Macquarrie commented.

"This is the kind of utterance which would make Neville Chamberlain appear as one of the most vigorous and aggressive men of all times."

Mr. Macquarrie conceded there would be danger in flying in supplies.

"But are we in this new generation of such little faith that we as a nation and as a people are afraid of division and afraid of danger?"

"I say: Forgive your fears, discard your technical niceties, throw off your protective coloration of protocol and assist the people in Biafra whose suffering is indescribable."

Oil comes from a well. But sometimes y' git a "Well!" from oil.

SCHOOL ENTRY DENIED INDIANS

TORONTO (CP)—Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Scarborough West, today demanded that the departments of the attorney-general and education take the school board of Armstrong, Ont., to court for refusing to enroll children of squatting Indian families.

"No local board of education in this province has the right, under the Department of Education Act, to exclude children from its schools, for reasons such as those advanced by the Armstrong board," Mr. Lewis said in a statement.

The Ontario Indian-Eskimo conference in London, Ont., was told Saturday that Indian children at Armstrong, 135 miles north of Port Arthur, have been denied entry to the town's two-room, nine-grade school.

Yvonne McRae, director of the Lakehead branch of the Ontario Indian-Eskimo Association, said Armstrong ratepayers have stated publicly they believe the Indian students would lower the level of the school.

NEED CHANGES

The Indian children can get into the school only if senior governments first improve the living standards of their families, she said.

The Indians are a group which left the White Sands reserve near Lake Nipigon shortly after the Second World War and have been wandering and squatting since. They are living in one-room shacks on the edge of Armstrong.

The local school board argues that the Indians do not have to be admitted because they are not taxpayers, Mrs. McRae said.

Officials to Pave Way For Constitution Meet

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Officials of federal and provincial governments meet here Wednesday for three days of constitutional talks.

And a federal official has predicted "there will be some breast-beating" in reaction to the weekend disclosure of the contents of a Quebec brief submitted to the last such meeting in July.

Saturday the Toronto Telegram made public the contents of the document which reiterated the long-standing demand of the Quebec government for a drastic redistribution of powers between federal and provincial governments, and added—but only as a negotiable suggestion—the headline-making proposal that Canada become a republic.

Until then the meetings of the federal-provincial committee of officials had been held in the strictest secrecy.

The committee was set up by the constitutional conference composed of the prime minister and the premiers. Its role is to prepare the next meeting of heads of government, expected in late November or early December.

All governments agreed that negotiations would be more flexible if the committee meetings were held in secret.

Disclosure of the Quebec brief's contents provides the first clear public evidence that Prime Minister Trudeau's sweeping election victory in Quebec last June did not bring about any immediate reassessment of constitutional goals by the provincial government.

The document, submitted to the committee of officials during the month following the election, clings to the constitutional position held by the Johnson government since it came to power in 1966.

FIRM BASIS

It is as firmly based on "two nations" as Mr. Trudeau's campaign was on "one nation."

Since July, however, the provincial Liberal opposition has swung sharply toward a more federalist constitutional policy, softening its past stand in favor of a special status as a result of an elaborate survey of Quebec opinion.

In the immediate aftermath of the publication of the Quebec brief there was speculation here that it had been leaked in Quebec by a minister of official communications to Premier Daniel Johnson publicly to a relatively hard line and prevent him from changing his ground as Mr. Lesage has done.

Although the suggestion that the monarchy be replaced by a republican system drew much immediate public attention it had a minor place in the brief.

Premier Johnson has repeatedly told reporters in the past that Quebec has "other goals much more important than the abolition of the monarchy, although he personally favors a presidential rather than parliamentary and monarchical system of government."

Some observers here now believe that the suggestion was made in the brief mainly as a bargaining point which Quebec could concede in exchange for the enlarged powers that have been its long-standing goal.

Grade Work, Graveling For Renfrew

Regraveling will account for a large slice of the $100,000 to be spent on the Jordan River-Port Renfrew Road, Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch said Monday.

He said the project, given approval by treasury board, also will include reducing the steep road grades at several creek crossings and improving the bridge approaches.

Work will begin this fall and is expected to be completed sometime during the winter, he said.

Another treasury board approval, for expenditure of $2,285,000, will see construction begin soon on the first phase of Greater Victoria's long-awaited provincial vocational school project to be sited on Interurban Road, near the Wilkinson Road provincial jail.

The initial sum will provide the workshop complex for the school which is estimated to cost an ultimate $4.5 million.

Shells Rain On Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese forces fired 105-millimeter howitzer shells into Cambodia to silence Viet Cong gunners shooting across the frontier, the commander of South Vietnam's 3rd Corps said today.

The disclosure by Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri came soon after American strategic bombers dropped 750 tons of bombs in saturation patterns along the Cambodian frontier during the night. The four big raids on the infiltration route northwest of Saigon indicated continuing apprehension that further Communist efforts are expected in the area.

Hold-Up Men Killed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Two men attempting to rob a bank branch were shot to death and a companion was wounded today by police who had staked out the bank on a tip, officials reported.

MEETING OF NATO foreign ministers with U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk will be held in New York Oct. 7 to discuss the changed situation in Europe resulting from the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

secrets, the story says. Certain officers masqueraded as Russian agents and paid a substantial amount in small bills for the information after the man got in touch with them.

Almost immediately, "the Mounties picked up the civil servant and took him to headquarters for interrogation."

The newspaper says a report was sent to Mr. Trudeau who decided against prosecution. The civil servant, who had continued his work for several months "never sure when he would be charged," was told he could either resign or face "unpleasant" action.

The civil servant was also informed he could appeal "either to his public service organization or to the public service commission."

He did neither. He just quit."

The newspaper says it was unable to determine exactly what the secrets were. "Some sources indicate it was 'hot stuff' on the espionage market. Others maintain it was routine information that appeared to be more valuable than it was."

"However, it was classified material taken from a military office, which Iron Curtain intelligence organizations would be interested in."

NIXON TO TRY HYDROFOIL

U.S. presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon will be a passenger on the Seattle-Victoria hydrofoil Wednesday—but he won't come here.

Pressures of his campaign trip will permit only a short harbor tour in Seattle, Republican party officials said today.

Mr. Nixon was to arrive at Seattle airport at 4:30 p.m. today for a speech in University Plaza. He takes off for Denver, Colo., soon after his hydrofoil ride.

YOUNG HEART TRANSPLANTED TO MAN, 46

HOUSTON, Tex. (Reuters)

— A 46-year-old Mesa, Ariz., man today received the heart of a 17-year-old high school student in a transplant operation at Methodist Hospital.

A hospital bulletin said Dr. Michael DeBakey and a team of specialists has "satisfactorily completed the operation on Verne L. Martin." The patient was "progressing satisfactorily."

The donor was Michael Jennings who died of head injuries from an auto accident Sunday.

It was the world's 52nd heart transplant, the 32nd in the United States and the 16th in Houston.

DRUG BILL RETURNS TO COMMONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Monday reintroduced its bill aimed at lowering drug prices.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford got speedy and routine first reading of the measure which would wipe out some of the patent protection now enjoyed by Canadian manufacturers and thus encourage more foreign competition.

A similar bill was presented in the last Parliament but it died when Prime Minister Trudeau dissolved Parliament for a general election.

New Democratic Party spokesmen said during the election preliminaries that the drug companies had mounted such a strong campaign against the bill that the government would not bring it back before a new Parliament.

Conservative opposition to the bill when it was first debated was that the easy importation of drugs would make it impossible to control their quality.

Conservatives also said the impact on the Canadian drug industry may seriously reduce its ability to carry on drug research.

John Turner, who was then consumer affairs minister, said the food and drug directorate would continue to exercise strong control on drug imports.

The government also says the legislation will not affect employment in the Canadian drug industry. It said too that little research is carried on in Canada and what little is done is due more to government subsidy than patent protection.

Back From Talks

LONDON (Reuters)—British government envoy James Bottomley arrived here today from confidential talks in Rhodesia that could lead to another effort by Prime Minister Wilson to settle Rhodesia's independence issue.

He said the bishops will endeavor to set pastoral guidelines to assist both priests and parishioners having trouble in this area.

SEARCH FOR ANSWER

Bishop Carter, asked about a priest's association statement which asked where Roman Catholics could respectfully disagree, said bishops were searching for the same answer.

The submission, by the 350 members of the Western Canadian Priests Association, has been placed with other submissions before a commission established by the bishops to study the encyclical.

The commission is expected to draft a statement for consideration by the bishops. Its contents will not be made public.

Other questions to be considered include reinstatement of deacons in Canada, questions on the role of priests, on the role of the conference, jurisdiction for priests, care of immigrants, liturgy and bilingualism and a matter of catechism.

Bishop Carter said he presumed the conference will accept the reinstatement of deacons, a measure made necessary in other countries because of a shortage of priests.

Laymen are appointed deacons to assume some of the duties of priests.

Will success spoil Double Distilled whisky?

The word about Double Distilled's unsurpassed value and flavor is really getting around. And frankly, we're a bit concerned, because success has been the ruin of many fine products. Can Double Distilled stand the strain? We think so. After all, it's held up perfectly for 60 years now. In all that time, our single aim has been to please the taste of British Columbians. We seem to be succeeding. And we're not about to change a good thing.

B.C. DOUBLE DISTILLED

WASHINGTON—Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle has summoned all 130 pastors of churches in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Washington to a special meeting Wednesday at St. Patrick's Church here.

Letters to the pastors Monday, notifying them of the session, stressed the importance of their attending and said the gathering will deal with "extremely urgent matters," according to one source.

Although no further information was available on the agenda, Cardinal O'Boyle is expected to review aspects of the crisis over birth control and conscience with the senior priests.

Housing Problems Blamed On Lack of Co-ordination

QUEBEC (CP) — Federal housing laws may be all right but they don't get a chance to work, a series of spokesmen complained Monday in representations to the Hellyer housing inquiry.

Quebec Mayor Gilles Lamontagne said the Quebec provincial government and the federal government take too long to process the city's plans for action, possibly because their agencies cannot get along.

A low-income group waiting years for the benefits of urban renewal in the decaying St. Roch area of this city said Mayor Lamontagne is "always throwing the ball back to the provincial government."

Another group, in an afternoon appearance before Transport Minister Hellyer, said only a new super-body will cut through the clutter of boards and agencies that now control housing decisions.

Laval University's school of architecture proposed that officials selected from government, lending institutions and building firms be given power to chart the course of housing and city development.

Under Laval's plan, a symposium of these officials would be set up on its campus here. "It would be a place where the people who have the power can get the courage to make decisions."

HELLYER SKEPTICAL

Mr. Hellyer and his colleagues were skeptical. "A new super-government?" said Mr. Hellyer. "Thank you for an extraordinary suggestion."

Monday was the first day on the road for the group of seven investigators who will travel Canada until the end of November studying housing conditions. It proved to be an uncertain start. Four members had to rely on a simultaneous translation of disorganized presentations to the afternoon hearing. Much was lost in the process.

The day had its abrupt contrasts. First stop for the members of the inquiry was made at Laval student residences worth $11,000,000. Then, after an audience at city hall with the mayor, the group spent an hour in St. Roch walking its narrow streets and finally trooping across several acres of dirt fill to the St. Charles River, where several municipalities dump sewage.

A knot of 30 residents from the old St. Roch district were waiting for the housing inquiry with signs asking Mr. Hellyer to end "40 years of waiting."

He was presented with a petition asking for the removal of a CP Rail right-of-way blocking the renewal scheme among the old two- and three-storey buildings.

Explains Delay

Mayor Lamontagne said earlier a city renewal study was completed in mid-1966 but a subsequent agreement between the city and Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. became void when the Quebec Housing Corp. was formed by the government.

Mr. Lamontagne said the city is awaiting decisions about getting rid of the railway and building main roads, but now it must funnel all its requests through the QHC.

The two housing agents should find faster ways to enable them to put their housing projects into action, he said.

Later, representatives of the St. Roch residents, whose salaries range between $2,000-$3,000, appeared at an afternoon hearing and talked about frustrating years waiting for the promised urban renewal project.

Group spokesman Raymond Parent said they want to launch co-operative housing, possibly with government subsidies, but not the kind of subsidies that are attached to family income.

He said the group's co-operative housing scheme could provide accommodation at $5 to $100 a month without subsidy because it would run without a profit.

The Hellyer group flew Monday night to Charlottetown, where a tour and another hearing were scheduled today.

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Bill Wakeham, the Gorge Vale belter who met a week's expenses by pocketing the first-place purse in the Glen Meadows Open at the weekend, and Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer will be gunning for professional tour tickets next week.

Vollmer and Wakeham will leave next weekend for a tournament player training school in Florida.

About 90 pros will be striving for the limited and precious playing cards that will allow them to tread along the Gold Trail as tour regulars.

Also attending the school will be four Seattle-area golfers who, through participation in Pacific Northwest events, are well known in Victoria. They are fledgling professionals Mike Evans, Bill Tindall, Mike Reasor and Tom Storey.

Only two Canadian golfers—Moe Norman ($10,366) and Alvie Thompson ($6,999)—won more money than Vollmer or Wakeham on the recent all-Canadian tour, and one would suspect one or both of the B.C. boys may turn up with that coveted PGA card.

Vollmer tried last year. He failed miserably and was a down-hearted individual when he returned to Vancouver. He started slowly on the Canadian tour but then recovered his cool and confidence and finished third ($6,031) on the earnings parade. Wakeham was fourth with $5,630 in official earnings.

Locally, the big play Sunday was on the club championship level. With the fall of Ricky Kent at Colwood, only one of five area clubs has a chance of naming a successful defender.

Last year's club champs at Gorge Vale, Victoria and Uplands are out of the picture. Cedar Hill's Ray Harrington is the only defender still on the march.

Harrington, bidding for a third straight title, appears to be in a hurry to get home first and fastest. He defeated Gord Tregear on Monday to step into the semi-finals. Other contenders—Greg Canfield, Ron Griffiths, Gerry Smith, Bob Herberston, Greg Barnes and Brian Gandy—won't play their quarter-final bouts until the weekend.

At MacLeod, Gord Jones, Jim McCall and Cec Ferguson reached the semis at Gorge. Jones did it the hard way, defeating Vince Clarkson on the 22nd hole with a birdie. Clarkson missed a 40-inch putt on the 18th hole that might have settled it all there and then.

At Oak Bay, the big news was the fall of Dr. George Bigelow. Bill Thompson upset the former Canadian seniors' champion and joined Bruce McFarlane, Brian Carbery and Doug Munro in the semi-finals.

At Uplands, Gord Fellow, Dave McCall, Claude Heggie and Roger Bishop filled the fours.

Several-times champion Laurie Kerr was the one who sidelined Kent, on the 18th, at Colwood. Colwood's other first-round winners were Blair Wilson, Vic Painter, Ron Howard Sr., Dave Hogarth, Max Buckley, Joe Evans and Ted Colgate.

BRIEFLY: Norm Neely and George Robertson, a pair of Uplands playing-pals, figured in one of the longest club playoffs on record. Meeting in a flight quarter-final, they finished the regulation 18 holes all square. They halved a pair of playoff holes, and decided to settle it during their regular Saturday outing. That, too, ended all square, and they marched off two more playoff holes. After 40 holes, they still remained deadlocked. They finally used a coin to decide the match.

Neely won the flip.

Tapping Oak Bay's hole-in-one fund at the weekend was Dr. Bonar Buffam. He scored his ace on the 13th. Old friend Graham McCall, who usually confines his golf tributes to the playing prowess of his son, Dave, forgot himself at Qualicum Beach recently and came up with a hole-in-one. The autumn manoeuvres around the pro shops has been fierce. Colwood's Bill Court has taken on Glen Davies and Bob Hogarth as his assistants. They'll replace Earl Davies, who has joined Dick Mann at Point Grey in Vancouver, and John Morgan. The latter will replace Jay Wilson at Oak Bay. Wilson is leaving for Grenada in the Bahamas to join former Victorian Jimmy Squires in the yacht chartering service.

Golf Body Adopts Hard-Line Stand

NEW YORK (AP) — Max Elbin, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, called for an end of concessions to the touring pros Monday and said they would be given no voice in future tournament management.

Elbin released a three-page mimeographed statement, outlining the policy of the PGA.

The PGA president said it had been a mistake in 1946 to accede to the players' requests for more authority in managing the tour.

"We intend to give the players more adequate representation in tournament policy," he said "but none whatsoever in tournament management."

Elbin's statement said he felt it his duty to protect all parties with an interest in the tour no matter how few of today's touring pros give the PGA their support.

"Some of those who have precipitated the difficulties may be surprised to find out how little time will be required to develop a new crop of capable players," his statement concluded.

The officials of the PGA and a new organization of touring pros have been feuding over control of the lucrative tournament tour.

BILL RIGNEY

Boot Boss Joins Angels As Manager

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angels gave manager Bill Rigney a new two-year contract Monday and hired Dick Walsh, commissioner of the North American Soccer League, as general manager on a long-term pact.

Rigney, 50, has managed the Angels since their inception in 1961 and said he was happy to continue with the American League club.

Salary terms were not disclosed although informed sources had said earlier Rigney would receive $60,000 a year.

Walsh, 45, was a vice-president with Los Angeles Dodgers from 1960 through 1966 when he was elected commissioner of the United Soccer Association. When the two soccer leagues in North America merged this year, he became president and later commissioner of the North American league.

Walsh succeeds Fred Haney, who announced last month he was stepping down as general manager but would remain with the Angels as adviser.

There had been reports Rigney would leave the Angels to go with either the Kansas City expansion club in the American League or return to San Francisco. He managed the Giants of the National League from 1956-57 in New York and in San Francisco from 1958 until he was fired on June 18, 1960.

Walsh and Rigney said the No. 1 objective of the club for next year would be to develop more bat power.

Lunsford Seeks 'Interference' Penalty for TV

WINNIPEG (CP)

There is not much he can do about the weather, but general manager Earl Lunsford, of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, says rain wasn't the only reason for the small crowd at Sunday's Western Football Conference game here.

There was the matter of a National League game on CBC television between Minnesota Vikings and Green Bay Packers. The Vikings have particular attraction in Winnipeg because they are coached by Bud Grant, formerly of the Bombers, and the quarterback is B.C. Lions' graduate Joe Kapp.

"I want an explanation for this," said Lunsford angrily.

"We're in last place and we have bad weather to contend with, which is bad enough, then we have to fight with the NFL for support. And this is supposed to be a Canadian network supported by Canadian taxpayers."

IT HURTS

Rain, threatening all morning, started at game time and came down in torrents for most of the first half. Only 11,500 sat through it to watch the Bombers defeat Edmonton Eskimos 25-13.

Even at that, the crowd was a shade larger than the attendance of Aug. 18 when Calgary Stampeders were the visitors.

That game, without the counter-attraction of NFL television, was rained on heavily as well.

The only home attendance of sell-out proportions was 21,500 Sept. 8, a sunny afternoon when the Bombers looked inept in losing 21-15 to Montreal Alouettes.

On a day when the weather is poor, a game like the Viking-Green Bay affair ruins us," said Lunsford.

"I'm going to kick up a storm at the next CFL meeting and do something about the CBC pipping in NFL games on the afternoon of our games."

INDIA CINCHES Eastern Zone

TOKYO (AP)—India defeated Japan Sunday in the finals of the Eastern Zone's Davis Cup tennis competition.

India now will play West Germany at Munich for the right to meet the United States in the final of the international playdowns.

The ultimate winner will play Australia's cup-holders in the challenge round in Australia in December.
